A FATAL RAID.

INQUEST ON JOSEPH HUDSON.

The Deputy Coroner for South County Dublin held an inquest at St. Michael's Hospital, Kingstown, yesterday, relative to the death, which took place at the hospital on Saturday afternoon, of Joseph Hudson (18), a painter, of 3 Carroll's Cottages, Glasthule, who was wounded during a raid by national troops at his residence on the night of the 10th inst.

Bernard Hudson, 3 Carroll's Cottages, identified the remains as those of his brother, whom he last saw alive on the evening of the 10th inst.

Medical evidence showed that Hudson had a bullet wound in the front of the abdomen. The cause of death was hemorrhage and shock, caused by the bullet wound.

Mr. James Comyn (instructed by Mr. O hUadhaigh), who appeared for the next-of-kin, asked for a short adjournment to enable him to consult with his clients.

The Coroner acceded to this request, and an adjournment was made for ten minutes.

Mr. Michael Noyk, solicitor, appeared on behalf of the military authorities.

Brigadier Niall McNeill was examined by Mr. Noyk, and said that from information received he proceeded to Carroll's Cottages with about ten men, armed, with one exception, with service Webley revolvers. On the way they heard a long, shrill whistle, such as would be made by a military or police whistle. They pulled up and dismounted, and searched a group of men and boys, and found a whistle of police type on a little boy about 12 or 14 years, who said that he had blown it. When asked "Why?" the boy said that it was "by accident." This was close to the house where the shooting took place. Witness and his men then proceeded to the house, and took up positions.

Within a minute a number of shots rang out—at least a dozen—and by far the greater number were from automatic pistols. Witness took with him a search light, and went in the direction of the shots. He had just passed the house from which the shooting had taken place when he heard a lot of wailing.

The door opened, and he saw a wounded man being carried out. Someone shouted that it was one of his men who was wounded, but he found that it was not. He at once gave instructions to have the man placed in the car, and he was driven to the hospital, where he was handed over to the care of the staff.

Mr. Noyk—Was anything handed to you? Yes. A "Steyer" automatic pistol was handed to me by the Adjutant, who said that he had found it where Hudson fell. The ammunition in that gun did not fit the weapon, and an attempt had been made to force it into the chamber.

Witness produced the seven rounds of ammunition found, three of which were of the wrong calibre.

To Mr. Comyn—My object was to go to Carroll's Cottages and arrest men, if there. We had two cars. I am told that Hudson was in the Republican Army, but do not know it. From examination I swear that two rounds had been fired out of the Steyer automatic. The instructions to the men were to arrest any armed men they found in the house, and, if fired on, to fire in return.

Lieutenant Fitzgerald stated that he entered the house in Carroll's Cottages, and in the back yard he saw a number of men jumping over the wall. He called on them to halt and put their hands up, and he was immediately fired at. Having his revolver in his hand, he, in carrying out his instructions, returned the fire in self-defence. One man seemed to slip and fall.

Cross-examined by Mr. Comyn—Hudson was a very decent lad. It would not be true if Hudson, in a dying declaration, said that he was shot with his hands up.

Further evidence having been given, on the application of Mr. Comyn, the inquest was adjourned to noon on Monday next.

As a souvenir of their recent visit to the Majestic at Cowes, the King and Queen have sent large autograph portraits of themselves to Mr. H. A. Sanderson, chairman of the White Star Line, for display in the vessel.

HAS YOUR HUSBAND GOT INDIGESTION ?

Nothing creates domestic discord quicker than an attack of indigestion, and nothing gets rid of indigestion quicker than Bisurated Magnesia. If your husband has some form of digestive trouble—neither scold nor pity him, just help him by seeing that he has some Bisurated Magnesia Tablets at hand. They are prompt, sure, safe, and cost but a trifle at any chemist's. Doctors prescribe Bisurated Magnesia Tablets, hospitals use them and thousands praise them daily. When purchasing, it should be remembered that there are many kinds of magnesia tablets, but "Bisurated" are the ones for stomach-sufferers.

BISURATED MAGNESIA is the best remedy for indigestion, and is also obtainable in powder form.

SELECTION OF PLANTS.

SOME INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS.

At the invitation of the Irish Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, a number of farmers from surrounding counties, together with repesentatives of the seed trade and brewing and distilling industries, recently visited the experimental and demonstration plots of the plant breeding and plant diseases division of the Department at the Agricultural College, Glasnevin, for the purpose of examining newly-produced and recently-introduced varieties of wheat, oats, and barley, and inspecting the experimental work being carried out in Ireland with the disease known as leaf-roll in potatoes.

The object in carrying out variety tests is to obtain reliable data as to the relative value of the best varieties of cereals in cultivation, so as to enable the plant-breeding division to advise farmers as to the most suitable and most profitable.

Twenty-eight varieties of cereals—eight varieties of wheat, six of winter-sown oats, ten of spring-sown oats, and four of barley—including new varieties raised by the plant-breeding division, well-known standard varieties, and the most promising of the new varieties which have recently been put on the market by the leading plant-breeding stations of Great Britain, Denmark, and Sweden are under test.

All the wheat plots look very promising, and there is every likelihood that the yield in each case will be well above the average. None of the plots are badly "lodged," but the straws of Queen Wilhelmina and that of a native wheat from County Donegal appear to be weaker than those of other varieties and heavy rain would probably lodge these two plots badly.

Yeoman, Marshal Foch, Stormproof, Harvester, and Swedish have tillered well. Yeoman has a short, but very strong straw, and the heads are large and heavy. Marshal Foch and Stormproof have tillered even better than Yeoman, but the heads are much smaller. This is especially the case with Marshal Foch. Swedish Iron and Harvester look very promising; but they are late ripening sorts, and will not be ready to cut until a fortnight later than the others.

WINTER-SOWN OATS.

The question as to whether it is better to sow oats in autumn or early winter, rather than in spring, is now receiving considerable attention, not alone in Ireland, but in all oat-growing countries, and the plots devoted to winter-sown oats, therefore, attracted considerable interest. Of the six varieties included in the test, two—Banner and Marvellous—are white grained; one—Winter Grey—is a tawny oat; and three—Black Great Mogul, Bountiful, and Black Tartary—are black grained.

So far as winter hardiness is concerned, there appears to be no difference betwen Banner and Marvellous. At present Marvellous looks better than Banner. It has a good stiff straw, and will yield well. The grain appears to be plump, but somewhat thick in the husk. Grey Winter is a variety that tillered splendidly during the winter, and is extremely winter hardy. It produces a good straw, suitable for feeding purposes, but liable to lodge. The variety will return the highest total yield (grain and straw), and will also probably produce a high weight of grain alone.

Of the black grained varieties, Bountiful is probably the hardiest, but there is little difference in this respect between it and Black Tartary, which, however, at present looks more promising. Black Great Mogul is not winter hardy, and should not be sown in the autumn.

Most interest in this section was centred in the hybrid variety—Black Potato—produced by the Department's Plant Breeding Division, by crossing Kent Birlie with Black Tartary. In tillering capacity, shape of ear, etc., the variety is like potato, but the grain, which is small and plump, is black. The straw appears to be very strong. The variety is rather late in ripening.

Of the other varieties included in the test, Supreme, which did not tiller well, has done very badly this year. Black Tartary, which is sown alongside the winter-sown plots of the same variety, is promising. Black Great Mogul, though also promising well, is weaker in the straw than the other varieties, and will probably go down before the harvest.

The most promising of the white grained oat varieties are Victory 2, and another of the Department's hybrids, Banner X Black Tartary 2. Botanically, Victory 2 resembles Victory very closely, but the straw is slightly longer, and three grained spikelets are much more numerous than in Victory. Banner X Tartary possesses a fine strong, stiff straw, and is extremely difficult to lodge. The head is sidey, like the Tartary parent, and the grain is white and plump. The variety will ripen later than the others.

BARLEY.

The varieties included in this test are Spratt X Archer 37/6, Spratt X Archer 37/18 (both produced by the Department's Plant Breeding Division), Abed Rex, and Archer. The experiment shows convincingly the superiority as regards strength of straw of the Spratt-Archer varieties over Abed Rex and Archer. The latter are so badly lodged that it will not be possible to cut them with a machine—the Spratt-Archers have not suffered.

Spratt-Archer 37/6 differs from Spratt/Archer 37/18 in respect of type of ears. The ears of 37/6 are held upright, while the ears of 37/18 are bent down at right angles to the straw. Spratt-Archer 37/18 ripens a few days earlier than 37/6. There is practically no difference in yield.

LEAF ROLL DISEASE IN POTATOES.

Leaf roll disease is now recognised as one of the main causes of the degeneration of pototo varieties, and, consequently, is being intensively studied in most European countries, in America, and even in distant Japan. The importance of the subject is shown by the fact tnat the decrease in yield due to the presence of the disease is estimated at 50 per cent. Modern opinion holds that now forgotten varieties, such as "Irish Apple" and "Irish Cup" (which had an international reputation a century ago), and their successors "Regent" and "Champion" would be still in their prime but for the diseases of the leaf-roll type.

Although it is not a new introduction—but probably one of the oldest and most widespread diseases—the presence of leaf-roll was only discovered in Ireland two years ago. Since then the disease has been under close study, and although results, as a rule, take two seasons to obtain, such progress has been made in that period as to ensure Ireland a place in the Bibliography of the subject.

Soon after the discovery in 1916 by Dr. Quanjer, the great Dutch pathologist, that leaf-roll was an infectious disease, it was proved by American and Dutch workers that aphids (green fly) were the carriers of infection in the field. This has been substantiated a number of times, with the result that aphids are now universally held responsible for the infection of healthy plants. Researches conducted at Glasnevin have now, however, discovered two new carriers, both leaf-sucking insects, called, respectively, Capsids and Jassids, which are sometimes very common in potato fields. Furthermore, another source of danger to healthy potatoes has been brought to light which is extremely important in some places—namely, the development of aphids on potatoes sprouting in boxes. It was proved this year for the first time that leaf-roll can be carried by these pests in this stage of the plants' development. In these experiments, which were carried out by sprouting tubers in insect proof cages, when the aphids were reared on leaf-roll diseased sprouts and then transferred to the sprouts of the half of a healthy tuber, that half produced a leaf-roll plant, while the other half produced a healthy plant. When, however, the same experiment was repeated with green fly, reared on healthy sprouts, both halves produced healthy plants.

The development of aphids on the sprouts has been proved to have a further significance. Hitherto, the original infestation of potato foliage with green fly has been traced to plants of the rose family (including all roses, hawthorn, apple, etc.), on which the eggs are laid. This, no doubt, takes place, but direct migration from sprouts to foliage has now been established. An effective and practical remedy for this double danger from infested sprouts has fortunately been discovered in fumigation with a harmless chemical, which is new to agriculture practice, called tetrachlorethane.

EXPLORING THE CAUSE.

The cause of the disease and the profound disturbances set up in the plant are also being closely studied at Glasnevin. It has been found possible to cause the leaves of a healthy plant to roll up (without any infection being present, so far as can be judged at the present time) by depriving the plant of all outlets for the carbohydrates it produces, and so forcing it to accumulate starch in the leaves. The rolling of the leaves is here the result of the starch accumulation. It has been known for a few years that one of the symptoms of the leaf-roll disease is the presence of an abnormal amount of starch in the leaves, but the significance of this phenomenon has never been explained. The results just mentioned and other confirmatory observations point to the conclusion that the disease acts by inhibiting the solution and transference of the starch manufactured in the leaves, which, in turn, prevents the formation of any more starch (and, incidentally, causes the leaves to roll upwards), thus leading to the starvation and dwarfing of the whole plant, and to a very small crop of tubers.

ROT IN APPLES.

In a paper recently published in the Scientific Proceedings of the Royal Dublin Society, Mr. H. A. Lafferty, A.R.C.Sc.I., and Dr. G. H. Pethybridge (of the Seeds and Plant Disease Division of the Department of Agriculture), describe an unusual form of rot in apples, found on specimens submitted for examination in 1920. The diseased fruits were apparently healthy when gathered, but began to rot about ten days later.

After prolonged study of the disease, during which certain new scientific discoveries as to various types of rot in apples were made, it was found that the specific disease under investigation was caused by a species of fungus. The source from which the fruits became infected is not known, but, as in other cases of apple rot, it had been observed that the affected fruit was confined to the lower branches of the tree, near the ground, it is believed that infection came from the soil as a result of rain splashes, etc. Judicious propping up of hanging branches would probably, it is suggested, suffice to prevent infection. Fortunately, in the opinion of the authors, there is no reason to suppose that the particular form of apple-rot described in the paper is likely to become a serious menace to fruit growers in Ireland.

AROUND DUBLIN PLAYHOUSES.

"THE LADY OF THE ROSE."

The Horse Show attraction at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, consists of a sparkling new musical play, "The Lady of the Rose," being an adaptation by Frederick Lonsdale from the book by Rudolph Schanzer, with lyrics by Harry Graham, and music by Jean Gilbert.

The piece is in three acts, and abounds in pretty dances and sprightly songs, interspersed with lively, laughter-provoking dialogue, while in face, figure, and costume the ladies are all that the most exacting critic could desire. Indeed, the production, taken as a whole, is one of the best and brightest of the long series with which the name of George Edwardes is so pleasingly associated. The plot of the play is quite sufficient to carry it through as a sustained production.

Mr. Herbert Langley, in the part of Colonel Belovar, proves himself the possessor of a tuneful voice, which has already won him a reputation upon the operatic stage, and in the character assigned to him he cuts quite a picturesque military figure. Miss Edith Cecil, as Mariana, the wife of Count Adrian Beltrami (Mr. Vyvian Pedlar) is quite a captivating heroine; and Mr. John Hagan, as Suitangi, the silhouette cutter, is a breezy comedian, whose merry quips and capers keep the audience in merriment while he occupies the boards. Miss Wynne Bronte, as Rosina, makes a very jolly maid, and Miss Connie Walter, as Sophie Lavelle, a ballet dancer, plays her part to perfection. Mr. Fred. Russell contributes his quota to the merry-making as Baron Sprotti-Sprotti, and other parts are taken by Messrs. Walter Butler, Wallie Herald, Mansell Stringer, and Clifford Kibbler.

There are a full chorus and augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Sheridan Gordon, with an illusion by Neville Maskelyne in the second act.

THEATRE ROYAL.

The programme at the Theatre Royal last night was worthy of Show Week, and, as might be expected, it won great appreciation. "The Brooklyn Comedy Four," in their versatile harmony act have appeared before Royalty, and their humorous work in music and comedy upheld their reputation. Winifred O'Connor is a soprano of high range, and her ballads were greatly enjoyed. The Elliott Savonas, a party of seven, contributed their latest production, "The Garden of Harmony," and their performance was upon a high plane. The "Pall Malls," a lady and a gentleman gave an artistic act, the latter being a clever acrobat and tumbler. He was warmly applauded.

A troupe of five artists, "The Great Belgian Anserouls," specialise in double and treble somersaults. Julian Wylie's amusing picture, "15 Years Ago," written by George Black, to demonstrate the vast strides which have been made in film production in the period mentioned, was a sure laughter-maker. It introduces in the cast Mary Pickford, Mack Sennett, and other "star" artists, showing their work when they were practically unknown. It is, undoubtedly, interesting in this respect. The Brothers Curran were diverting, and a male artist who deputised supplied two capital comic songs.

ABBEY THEATRE.

A triple bill was presented last evening at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, to a fairly full house, and it was received with evident appreciation. The first piece was Lady Gregory's comedy, "The Workhouse Ward," the actors being Mr. Eric Gorman, Mr. Barry Fitzgerald, and Miss May Craig. This was followed by J. M. Synge's "In the Shadow of the Glen," the characters in which were taken by Miss Sara Allgood, Mr. Peter Nolan, Mr. Walter Dillon, and Mr. Fitzgerald.

The third piece was "The Building Fund," by Mr. William Boyle. Miss Allgood played the part of Mrs. Grogan with her usual perfection, and Mr. Frank Fay represented Shaun Grogan. They were worthily supported by Miss Eileen Crowe as Sheila O'Dwyer, Peter Nolan as Michael O'Callaghan, and F. J. M'Cormack as Dan M'Sweeney. A pleasing selection of music was played by Dr. Larchet's orchestra.

There will be a change of programme this evening, when "Cathleen Ni Houlihan," "Maurice Harte," and "The Young Man from Rathmines" will be staged.

EMPIRE THEATRE.

The Empire Theatre was well attended at both performances last evening, and a new company performed an excellent programme, which has been specially arranged for Horse Show Week. Lilian Dalby sang a couple of songs with fine spirit and effect, and was followed by the Gemmel Brothers, clever dancers and vocalists. Les Grandes Revuette Cie were much appreciated in their expert dances, songs, and appropriate music. As a crazy juggler Halma suited the rôle admirably, his performance being both interesting and humorous. Maraso and Socoloba, an artistic couple, were entertaining, and in their humouring of a lunatic they drew the laughter and unrestrained applause of the audience. A wonderful wire act by the Littlefields concluded a successful entertainment.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

The Orpheus Trio appear at the Tivoli Theatre this week in a humorous and vocal act. Hana and Marcel give a dancing display, and W. J. Jewel is a good ventriloquist. A gymnastic display is given by King, Louis, and Son. The Stebbing Trio, youthful acrobats, appear in a somewhat original series of exercises. Tom Fox, comedian, is as humorous as ever, and Helena Graham, contralto, sings some songs pleasingly.

TALKING BIRDS AT THE LONDON "ZOO."

THE MYNAH'S VOCABULARY.

Mr. E. M. Hawes, a Fellow of the Zoological Society resident in the Federated Malay States, has brought home a fine example of the Javan mynah (says The Times). This bird has the same general appearance as the larger Indian mynah, but exceeds it in size, and has more orange-red on the bill. It has a wide distribution in the Malay Archipelago, ranging from South Tenasserim to Malacca, Java and Borneo. It is an excellent talker, articulating distinctly and having a good vocabulary.

No problem is more baffling to those naturalists who wish to see some utility in every character of an animal than the talking capacity of certain birds. Ravens, starlings, mynahs, and a good many, although by no means all, the parrots and cockatoos can be taught to imitate human speech very closely. There is no reason to believe, although most owners do believe it, that the birds have any conception of the phrases they have learned to repeat and occasionally utter with startling appositeness.

Nearly all birds with songs have a power of attention and of mimicry, and certainly improve their own characteristic utterance when they can hear some specially good performer. But in most cases the song or notes, however perfected, remain characteristic of the species; very few birds are "mocking-birds" in the sense that they are able to acquire a song which might be mistaken for that of another species. On the other hand, the human speech acquired by talking birds has no relation to their natural cries, and it seems impossible to imagine any utilitarian advantage conferred on them by this facility for acquiring alien sounds. Like the unusual capacity of the elephant and the hyrax to become intimate with man, this power of talking must be regarded as an accidental outcrop of the mental and bodily nature of the birds which possess it.

General Sir Alexander Gibb, a life Fellow of the Society, who is at present designing the engineering side of the new Aquarium, has presented two peregrines captured on his estate in Ross-shire. They are young birds not yet in mature plumage, but are none the worse for their long train journey, and fed ravenously soon after their arrival. Peregrines are the fiercest and most daring of the birds of prey found in Great Britain, and take duck, guillemots, grouse, and partridges as well as rabbits. The eggs are laid usually on a ledge of a cliff by the sea or more rarely inland, and both parents savagely attack any intruders who approach the nest. Formerly these birds were much used in falconry, the male being called a "tiercel," the female a "falcon."

SEARCHED ON SUSPICION.

The ss. City of Dortmund yesterday arrived at the Port of Dublin, via Cork, where she was searched on suspicion of having contraband on board in the form of ammunition from her German loading port of Hamburg. The City of Dortmund at first berthed near the Custom House, Dublin, but later received instructions to go to the east end of the docks for discharge of cargo.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

Some wounded soldiers of the Irish national troops arrived at the North Wall Extension yesterday morning, having travelled by steamer from the South of Ireland. They were conveyed to quarters in the city by motor vehicles.

Mr. H. W. Wood has refused to accept the chairmanship of the Canadian Wheat Board, and the general expectation is that the whole project of a Wheat Board will be abandoned for this season.

Viscount Northcliffe.

The world has been the oyster of many adventurous Irishmen, who have opened it famously with sword or pen. None of them had a more remarkable career or exercised a more powerful influence on public affairs than the late Viscount Northcliffe. The nature of that influence has been the subject of much controversy. He touched such an immensity of things that to say now that nullum tetigit quod non ornavit would be to claim perfection for him. Indeed, Lord Northcliffe made many mistakes—for he had the strong defects of his strong qualities—but he will not be remembered by them. The balance of the work which his courage, his wonderful instinct, his enterprise and his genius for organisation enabled him to do is good and lasting; he has left the world better than he found it. He established and acquired great newspapers, and the profession of journalism is vastly in his debt. If it be argued that the control of a large portion of the Press by one man is a public danger, it may be said that, while Lord Northcliffe sometimes may have used that control unwisely, he never used it for selfish ends. He was not the first of the "multiple" proprietors, but he was by far the most high-minded of them. When Pitt died Sir Walter Scott wrote that "the beacon light was quenched in smoke" and "the warder silent on the hill." To-day the British Empire will make the same lament for Lord Northcliffe. Before, during and after the Great War he was a most vigilant—sometimes almost an inspired—guardian of his country's interests. His was the first British eye to see the gathering war cloud in Germany; his was the voice that averted a famine of shells, and afterwards, by its splendid advocacy of the Allied cause in the United States, won for its owner the compliment of Germany's special hatred. In two other ways Britain owes much to Lord Northcliffe's rarely blended gift of imagination and common-sense. He persuaded her to make safe her aerial frontiers and to tighten the bonds of Empire by a far-flung policy of imperial migration. Last of all—for Irishmen, perhaps, first of all—Lord Northcliffe truly loved and truly served the land of his birth. As his father's house at Chapelizod was the most precious part of his great possessions, so for him the Empire was not complete without this little island. Untiringly and urgently he preached Ireland's need of the Empire and the Empire's need of Ireland. It is a sadly dramatic coincidence that Arthur Griffith and Lord Northcliffe have died within the same week. They had little in common; yet they were close collaborators in the labour that has laid the foundations of Irish freedom. More than any other man, Lord Northcliffe directed British opinion into the mould of peace and created the opportunity which Griffith seized. His place in the Pantheon of the new and happier Ireland is secure.

Britain and France.

There seems, unfortunately, to be no room for doubt that the London Conference has been a complete failure. A further meeting was held yesterday when the Premiers of Britain, France and Belgium, with the Japanese Ambassador, exchanged views once more in regard to the moratorium proposal; but from the very outset there was virtually no hope of bridging the gulf between M. Poincaré and Mr. Lloyd George. What will happen next? An answer to the German memorandum of July 12th ought to have reached Berlin to-day. The Reparations Commission, however, has been forced to inform the Government of the Reich that it has been unable to reach a decision, and that, until such a decision is reached, the gold payment which falls due to-day will be held in suspense. From every point of view the position is most unsatisfactory. All the Allies, including France, agree that a moratorium for Germany is essential. The British would like it to be granted for ten years, the French for a few months; but in principle even M. Poincaré is at one with Mr. Lloyd George. The apparently insuperable barrier has arisen in connection with what the French call the modalités. M. Poincaré will not hear of a moratorium of any description unless France receives "productive guarantees" from the Germans, in the shape of "control" of the German mines and forests. Such "control" in practice would involve the dismissal, or suspension, of all German directorates, managers, foremen and the like, and their substitution by French officials. It would give Germany's enormously wealthy mines and forests completely into the hands of France.

Mr. Lloyd George, as we think very wisely, is determined to countenance no infringements of Germany's rights. M. Poincaré's scheme may seem to be very attractive on paper; but, as a British Minister is reported to have said, the seizure by France of the German mines would produce almost everything except coal. The very first result of such action would be a general strike of German workmen. Feeling throughout the Reich on this matter is running very high, and there is no doubt at all that all work would cease immediately. The French Government, then, would find itself faced with the necessity of employing methods of coercion. Thus the whole tragic business would begin all over again. France would invade the Ruhr, seize the property of German nationals, expel further "undesirables" from Alsace-Lorraine, and cause the mark to slide still further down the slope to disaster. M. Poincaré is returning to Paris to consult his colleagues in the French Ministry. In a crisis of such magnitude violence of language on either side of the English Channel is to be deplored. The great essential is that both the British and the French people shall keep their heads, and that they shall realise the identity of their interests now as they realised it eight years ago. If France attacks Germany, nothing but calamity can follow. The economic confusion of Europe will be worsened a hundredfold and the last hope of international rapprochement will vanish. Although delay in reaching a settlement is full of danger, anything would be preferable to a breach between Britain and France; and for that reason alone the British people will welcome Mr. Lloyd George's proposal to refer the whole matter to the League of Nations. M. Poincaré, however, has rejected this, as he has rejected every other compromise, and until the Paris Cabinet announces its intentions it would be idle to speculate about the future.

The American Strikes.

The announcement that the American railway executives are "standing pat" on the question of the restoration of seniority rights, and are preparing for a fight to a finish with the strikers, need not be taken too seriously. The parties to labour disputes are always most adamantine on paper when they are about to strike a bargain, and the taking over of the railways by the United States Government is not desired by either party. More serious is the news that in New Jersey bombs were thrown at a train, and that in Arizona and California trains have been marooned in the desert by their crews to the great hardship of the passengers. This is the work of the Bolsheviks in the movement. It must be understood that the strike is confined to shopmen. The train crews are not on strike and have no grievance, and their desertion of their trains on trifling pretexts was wholly unjustified. For this callous action they can be prosecuted, and President Harding is just the man to take that course. The trouble with strikes in the United States is that there are always Bolsheviks, eager with pamphlet and intrigue to urge the strikers to direct action, while the employers and the strike-breakers often are high-handed and brutal and every bit as defiant of the law as the strikers. The American railways, however, are vital to the nation's welfare, and neither side is likely to be permitted to fight a wage dispute to a finish or with the traditional scenes of violence and bloodshed that usually distinguish American strikes when they are allowed to go beyond a certain point. The Federal Government is as strong in this respect as the individual States are weak. The laws prohibiting interference with inter-State commerce and the carriage of mails are wide, and the Department of Justice is not slow to act where failure to act is likely to produce political after-effects. Least of all will public opinion in the United States tolerate the anarchistic efforts of international Bolsheviks.

New Stamps.

The smaller and more insignificant a State, the more frequent and painful its lapses into barbarism, the more frequent and divers are its issues of stamps. In some instances this is the republic's chief source of revenue. It was once the proud boast of the British Empire that it never stooped to this sort of thing. The United States and Azerbaijan might vie with each other in producing picturesque issues commemorative of this exposition or that centenary; but the British Government was understood severely to discourage such performances. This proud boast can be made no longer. A few days ago the Island of Barbuda, whose white inhabitants number eleven, issued a set of eleven stamps, with values up to five shillings, although two complete sets—one of the Leeward Islands generally and the other of Antigua—are already current in the island. This record is now to be eclipsed; for it is announced that the Island of Ascension is to have stamps of its own. Until quite recently Ascension was under the jurisdiction of the Lords of the Admiralty and was rated on their books, for the sake of conformity, as a British ship. Now it is administered from St. Helena and has decided to have its own post office. Financially, the move is a good one. At least fifty thousand collectors will buy the complete set, with a face value of, perhaps, a pound; and hundreds of thousands of small collectors will buy the lower values. If the inhabitants of Ascension Island, who number about one hundred and eighty, get the money, life on the island, now reported to be on the dull side, ought to become one ceaseless round of milk and honey. The least that the gratified beneficiaries can do is to adorn the stamp of the highest denomination with a speaking effigy of the Unknown Philatelist.

EUROPE'S PLIGHT.

POVERTY IN HIGH PLACES.

There is genuine drama in the fate of many in Central Europe to-day. Here is an advertisement from a Vienna paper of last month:—

"Leopold Wolfling, 88 Lanzerstrasse, translates from German, French, Italian. Lessons given."

Now, Leopold Wolfling is an ordinary name, "John Dunne" or "Maurice Murphy." But this "Leopold Wolfling" was, in reality, a very remarkable person, none other than an ex-Archduke of Tuscany. This Leopold did not wait for the war to overthrow him. Twenty years ago he grew tired of wealth and power and abdicated his titles and rights to succession. Coming "out into the world," he married a young soprano and settled down to the quietest of quiet lives.

That kind of romantic indifference ran in his family, for his sister, the ex-Queen of Saxony, married Toselli, an Italian piano-teacher, and she now lives in Brussels working as a needlewoman to make ends meet.

If these two "took the plunge" for love's sweet sake, there are others who have had to abandon their titles for ruder reasons. Baron Conrad von Hötzendorf, the ex-Chief of Staff of the Austrian Army, lives in seclusion at Innsbrück on a State pension allowed him by the new Government of about nine shillings a week in English money.

But for the proceeds of his book of memoirs this man, who could fling regiments about by a nod of his head four years ago, would now be in dire straits "with none so poor to do him reverence."

Another great Austrian soldier, the ex-Field-Marshal Kovess, is partner in a tobacco business at Buda-Pesth; while General Baron Arz lives in a cheap apartment in Vienna.

If war is "good for humanity," as some strange prophets tell us, perhaps it is because the vanquished, by reason of their ruin, have time to become philosophers. But philosophy "butters no parsnips," as the poor tumbled-down field-marshals and generals know to their cost these days.

J. DEANE.

GOLD IN IRELAND.

ITS NATIVE HAUNTS.

The would-be prospector who has no ambition to endure the rigorous winter cold of Canada or the scorching sun of Australia in the search for gold might usefully employ his talents at home. The search would be made in more prosaic surroundings, but in the event of success the deficiency of the romantic element might be easily overlooked. And for those inclined to deplore the lack of local colour, the terms "quartz reefs," "shallow placers," "deep placers," "dry gulch placers," and "shelf or bar placers," can be as successfully employed here as abroad.

Gold occurs in various places in the United Kingdom. A very early record occurs in the Annals of the Four Masters, A.M. 3656, where gold is mentioned as procured in Foithre Airthir Liffe, or in the mountains of Dublin and Wicklow; while at Lyra, Knockmiller, about two miles southward of Woodenbridge, Co. Wicklaw, the ancient timberings of a placer mine were found. From the Annals, it would appear that not only were gold "placers" worked in the valley of the Liffey, but also, in all probability, in the valleys of the headwaters of the Slaney. Unfortunately, the physical configuration of these river systems seems to have been greatly altered at no very distant period. The ancient workings are supposed to have been somewhere near Ballymore-Eustace. It has been stated on good authority that gold might still be looked for in Glanimale and the other head valleys of the Slaney, and in the ancient river course of the Liffey between Ballymore-Eustace and Baltimore.

The neighbourhood of the Moyola River, Co. Londonderry, was specially mentioned by Gerrard Boate, A.D. 1652, but though no gold has been found here for many years the nature of the rocks and minerals in the county where this river rises would suggest the possibility of locating stream-gold in the valley.

Coming to more modern times, in the Wicklow diggings the reefs have been unsuccessfully looked for; the gold was principally worked in the "shallow placers," and in a few cases in the "dry gulch placers." Neither the "deep" nor "bar placers" seem to have been explored in modern times. Gold has been detected, according to G. H. Kinahan, in the gossan lodes of the mines on the Ovoca mineral channel. The gossan lode of East Cronebane (Magpie Mine) seems to have been the richest. In the hope of recovering the gold said to exist in Glendun, near Cushendum, Co. Antrim, the "Glenarm and Antrim Mining Association" was formed in 1825 with the object of working the gravels of the river. How far they carried their researches is not known, but, from report, they seem to have encountered traces of copper and lead. A small quartz lode in the stream flowing from Lough Knadas, one mile due east of Ballyshannon, has been credited with the possession of gold.

On the other side of the Irish Sea, it is said that there is to be found in North Wales an area 25 miles by 10, which has as good a showing of gold for the work done as any area of similar dimensions in any part of the world. The assertion is made confidently that if this area existed in an inaccessible part of the world a gold boom would easily spring into being, ample capital would be immediately forthcoming from the British public to work it, and numerous quartz mills with concentrating plants would thunder in the valleys. The mistake made here by the companies formed to explore the area lay in the adoption of a system of hunting for rich pockets of gold ore, running into ounces per ton, and neglecting the base metal concentrating ore, containing pennyweights to the ton.

THE "FIGHTING 69th."

FROM MARYE'S HEIGHTS TO WATERFORD.

The recent capture of Waterford City by Colonel-Commandant Prout—effected, as it appears to have been, with a minimum amount of damage, and very little loss of life—revives interest in the fact that Commandant Prout served with the famous "Fighting 69th" Irish-American Regiment in the Great War.

Colonel-Commandant Prout, whom an Irish Times Correspondent describes as "a fine, handsome, soldierly figure, some six feet in height," had already distinguished himself at the storming of Ormonde Castle some months ago. In carrying out his Waterford enterprise he relied on a gallant contingent of the Kilkenny Brigade, aided by a Tipperary section. The Kilkenny men had already been in action in Dublin and at Blessington. At Waterford they proved themselves disciplined and seasoned soldiers—cool and self-possessed under fire.

Of such stuff was the "Fighting 69th" New York Regiment composed. And just as the old 69th was one of the first regiments to volunteer for active service in the American Civil War, in 1861, so the 165th Infantry (as the old corps had been re-named) was the first American unit to volunteer for foreign service in the Great European War.

And as the old fighting spirit remained so did the old familiar name, in spite of Army regulations.

"Apparently," says a contemporary report of the U.S.A. Government Committee for Public Information, "it will take more than a world war to destroy the individuality which the Civil War bestowed upon the New York regiment, composed largely of men of Irish birth. . . . When General Pershing pinned the war cross on the breast of Father Francis Duffy after the July fighting on the Ourcq he gave it to the chaplain of the 165th, but every newspaper in the country, in rejoicing over the honour to the heroic priest talked about the glory of the '69th.' . . . Columns in all the papers celebrate the exploits of 'the boys of the '69th.'"

"The 69th," said another account, "are the wonder of France—they stop at nothing. . . . In one day during the drive at Château Thierry they captured 8,000 prisoners!"

The brilliant achievements of the Fighting 69th in the American Civil War are well worthy of recall. From the outset they distinguished themselves, their first honour dating from the disastrous engagement at Bull Run, where a Confederate foeman declared that they stood like a rock in a rushing whirlpool. And General MacDowell, having witnessed their gallantry, rode up and thanked them personally.

Later on the 69th formed the nucleus of General Meagher's Irish Brigade, and one thrills with pride on reading of the achievements of those gallant Irish heroes at Fair Oaks, Malvern Hill, Antietam, Marye's Heights, Fredericksburg, and at other numerous engagements. And one's heart warms at the noble testimony borne to Irish character and courage by the foremost Generals of the American Army.

The bravery of Meagher's Irish Brigade, as displayed at Marye's Heights, carried away even the war correspondents of the London Times, from one of whose messages the following is an extract:—

"Never at Fontenoy, Albuera, or at Waterloo was more undaunted courage displayed by the sons of Erin than during these six frantic dashes against the almost impregnable position of the foe.

". . . . The bodies that lie in dense masses within forty yards of Colonel Wilton's guns are the best evidence of what manner of men they were who pressed on to death with the dauntlessness of a race which has gained glory in a thousand battlefields, and never more richly deserved it than at the foot of Marye's Heights in 1862."

THE SOUTH-WEST.

PLEASANT YACHTING COAST.

A few words about the South-West coast of Ireland may be of use, as, given suitable weather, delightful cruising can be indulged in between Youghal and the Shannon. Snug and picturesque harbours are plentiful, but the majority had better be made in daylight, as such luxuries as leading lights do not exist.

Up to 1914 the number of English yachts coming to this coast was steadily increasing, and is likely to do so again when yachting is in full swing once more. Many yachtsmen learnt a good deal about the West of Ireland when hunting submarines. These men will not be happy till they have cruised round Ireland under happier conditions.

Starting from Youghal, the smaller craft should endeavour to make Castle Haven the first day, and should the wind be favourable there are Kinsale and Glandore to run into. Kinsale is at times hard to get out of—I have taken three hours to make the Old Head when the wind has been off-shore. But once abreast of the Old Head it is plain sailing past Clonakilty, Galley Head, and Glandore to the anchorage under Castletownshend. There the hospitality of the place is so pronounced that the only difficulty is getting up anchor again!

Weather conditions will have a good deal to say to the next voyage. If the wind is suitable for making the short-cut through Gascanane Sound it will save rounding Cape Clear. Schull, Crook Haven, and Castletown are harbours within easy reach; but with a southerly wind Kenmare River can be made through Dursey Sound. Once in the bay mysteriously called Kenmare River there are several charming harbours to head for, chief among them being Sneem, near Parknasilla. Sneem is easily entered by day, but at night is dangerous.

At Garinish Island an anchorage amidst beautiful surroundings can be had. Do not anchor off the Parknasilla Hotel, which is easily reached from Garinish. Should a visit be paid to Kenmare it is better to avoid approaching nearer than Dinish, as mudbanks are common beyond. Other harbours worth visiting in the Kenmare River are lovely Derreen and Derrynane, the latter has a tricky entrance.

From Kenmare River a day's sail with a favourable wind will bring one to Valentia, and a beautiful sail it is, passing the Skelligs and Waterville. Avoid trying to approach Waterville. If an anchorage has to be sought in Ballinskelligs Bay, make for the village of that name, though it is not the best of harbours. Valentia is snug enough as a rule.

Dingle, in the magnificent bay of that name, is a capital harbour, with much to interest one in the neighbourhood. Thence the yachtsman may tackle the sail to the Shannon, with Fenit on the way, or he can commence the homeward voyage, visiting the harbours he missed on the way out. Bantry and Glengarriff, at the head of Bantry Bay, are charming spots. Further south he can put into the fishing station of Baltimore, and, of course, the hospitable house of the Royal Cork Yacht Club in Queenstown must not be left out.

Cruising round such an exposed coast must be attempted with care. It is no joke to be caught in a gale outside Cape Clear or anywhere else; neither is it pleasant to be becalmed for a couple of days off huge cliffs, which at night-time seem to come ever nearer. In settled summer weather there should be no trouble, but avoid keeping in too close to the headlands, which have baffling currents round them. The ordinary charts answer all requirements.

The yachtsman who performs this cruise will end it feeling that all has been one continual panorama of glorious mountain scenery and rugged cliffs, amidst which have lain the snuggest of harbours. The joys of such a cruise are only known to those fortunate enough to make them.

THE IRISH RAILWAYS.

A CRUX AVERTED.

As the result of a series of conferences between representatives of the National Union of Railwaymen, the Amalgamated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, the Irish Railway Clerks' Association, and the Government, a crisis in the relations between the companies and the employés in the running departments has been averted.

It is learned that after a conference held yesterday at the Government offices, the present agreement existing between the companies and the men, which was put into operation pending the findings of the Irish Railway Commission appointed by Dail Eireann, will continue in force until the end of the year, and no cut in wages will be made in the meantime.

What was known as the "Carrigan Award" was due to be put in force to-morrow, and its enforcement would have led to an awkward situation. The announcement of the continuance of the agreement at such a time will be received with approval.

DUBLIN CASTLE.

It was officially announced last night that Dublin Castle and Ship street Barracks will be handed over to the Irish Provisional Government's Civic Guard on Thursday at noon, not to-day, as originally arranged.

THE KING'S YACHT.

Following the King and Queen's inspection during Cowes week of His Majesty's famous racing yacht Britannia, which was not put into commission this season, the King has given orders for extensive work on the yacht, including re-coppering and re-caulking of the hull, which is being carried out by Mr. George Marvin, with a view to the Britannia's reappearance in next year's racing.

The Criminal Tribunal of the French Court of Cassation has rejected the appeal of Dagobert, who was condemned to death on June 23 for the murder of the Englishman, Mr. William Gourlay, near Boulogne.

LONDON LETTER.

VISCOUNT NORTHCLIFFE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
MONDAY NIGHT.

In all the columns that have appeared to-day regarding Lord Northcliffe there is singularly little about his connection with Ireland. He came to London with his parents when he was only two years old, but he never lost his love for his native country. He gave striking proof of it in the two great daily papers that he controlled. I well remember a leading article which appeared in the Daily Mail early in 1900 during Queen Victoria's last visit to Ireland. It was entitled "The Golden Moment," and constituted a strong appeal to Mr. John Redmond to take his stand with the rest of the British Empire in the Boer War, and to the Conservative Party to give up its opposition to the legitimate aspirations of the great mass of the Irish people.

Nothing came of his endeavours at this time, but in 1908 he obtained control of The Times. He announced that there would be "no change whatever in the political or editorial direction of the paper, which will be conducted by the same staff on the independent lines pursued uninterruptedly for so many years." In general, this intention was carried out; but in one respect there was a very remarkable change. Through the greater part of its life, and particularly during the period from 1887 to 1896, The Times had been the most trenchant opponent of Home Rule for Ireland.

Lord Northcliffe, however, had convinced himself—for economic reasons, I think, rather than sentimental—that Ireland would not prosper until she had the control of her own local affairs. Very soon the leading articles in The Times began to reflect his opinions, and since the war it has steadfastly upheld the cause of Irish self-government. The words which The Times uses to-day respecting Mr. Griffith—"His death is unquestionably a great loss for Ireland, which is deprived by it of a patriot whose services to her, long, devoted and sustained, she can ill afford at this juncture to miss"—might well be repeated in regard to Lord Northcliffe.

Journalists have differed, and will long continue to differ, as to the effect of his influence upon their profession. His abounding energy and his extraordinary flair for news were undoubtedly accompanied by a certain flamboyance and sensationalism which did not please the more old-fashioned of us. But on one point we are all agreed. He did an immense amount to improve the conditions of the craft.

HIS GREAT INFLUENCE.

Lord Northcliffe is said to have been a millionaire before he was forty; but I do not think that he cared much for money, except as a means of acquiring influence and power. Nor did he hanker after public life in the ordinary sense of the word. He made one unsuccessful attempt to enter the House of Commons, but never tried again. After he became a Peer he rarely entered the House of Lords, and to the best of my recollection only once addressed it, and he refused to take office in the Cabinet of Mr. Lloyd George, though he had helped him to the Premiership.

Not that he was a bad speaker. He was fond of addressing the Sylvan Debating Club, which was founded by his father, and here and at other semi-private gatherings he spoke with ease and directness. To the end of his life, too, he wielded a fluent and picturesque pen, even when, as during his last tour round the world, he was obviously not in perfect health.

Mechanics always attracted him. He was one of the first motorists in this country, and in the first issue of the Daily Mail predicted the revolution in transport which the automobile was destined to bring about. "For three years previously," the Evening News tells us, "he had owned a motor-car which, owing to the antiquated regulations then enforced in England, was kept in France." He was also one of the keenest pioneers of aviation, and the greatest service, perhaps, that he rendered to his country was his insistence upon the necessity of its being provided with a large and up-to-date air fleet.

When the London Conference met it appeared as though the greatest barrier to a complete agreement was to be the question of a moratorium for Germany. As it happened, however, a compromise was arrived at with regard to the period of the proposed moratorium, but the deadlock has arisen over the terms upon which it was to be granted. There can be little doubt that the main stumbling-block has been the French proposal for the control of mines and forests. If "control" implied "supervision" in order to ensure that those industries were worked upon the most remunerative lines, an agreement would have been probable; but the French delegates appear to have interpreted "control" as "seizure." The first result of the operation of such a policy would, in all probability, have been a strike of the miners, and the trouble would not long have been confined to the coal mines, but would have spread quickly to other industries. It was an uninviting prospect, and the only supporters of the policy were the delegates who proposed it.

A DEADLOCK.

Until the delegations have actually left our shores it would be too early to assume definitely that the gulf which separates them is incapable of being bridged. The Belgian and Italian representatives are making strenuous efforts this evening to bring the Conference together again to-morrow morning. They regard the points upon which agreement was reached as satisfactory, and it is their belief that a formula which would be acceptable to both sides could be found if the deliberations were renewed. It is certain that, if their belief has any foundation, Mr. Lloyd George will leave no avenue unexplored in the effort to find a way out of the deadlock.

Reports from Scotland and the Yorkshire moors all tell the same story of disappointment. Heavy rains and dense mists have interfered badly with sport, and in many districts shooting parties have not been out at all. Bags have been poor, but it is generally agreed that the birds are fairly plentiful. The unsatisfactory sport has been due entirely to the weather, and, given more seasonable conditions, an excellent season is assured.

Most of the London Territorials who have been in camp for their annual training returned to town during the week-end. The London Irish arrived yesterday from Aldershot after a fortnight of camp life which has been marked by uncommon freedom from sickness. The inspecting officers from the Regular Army were well satisfied with the general efficiency shown by the Territorial divisions, and the first real training camp since the end of the war has been a success.

The King of Spain, who is taking part in several sporting events at Deauville, is coming to London shortly. Affairs of State are not responsible for his visit. As a matter of fact, he is coming to replenish his wardrobe. In this connection it may be observed that the tendency is for good clothes to become dearer and for cheap garments to become cheaper. There is quite a slump in materials of just ordinary quality, while nobody seems to want them, though the prices have been reduced to very low levels. On the other hand, the finer quality cloths are going higher. Probably the cloth manufacturers are themselves responsible for the discrimination on the part of most people; for the rubbishy materials which they supplied during the war period have proved that good clothes are an economy in the long run.

DRAMATIC ART RECOGNISED.

Among the Civil List Pensions announced yesterday is one of £100 to the widow of Sir Henry Irving, in recognition of his services to dramatic art.

SWOOP BY IRREGULARS.

ATTACK IN FORCE ON DUNDALK.

BARRACK CAPTURED AND JAIL EMPTIED.

CONCENTRATION NEAR DROGHEDA.

Great surprise was caused in Dublin yesterday when it became known that early in the morning irregulars had made a swoop on the town of Dundalk, and, overwhelming the garrison, liberated the prisoners in the jail and burned some buildings.

Afterwards they seized a train, and went off in the direction of Drogheda, apparently with the object of attacking it. The national troops there took measures to cope with the situation, and the latest news is that the irregulars are within four or five miles of the town. Up to midnight they showed no disposition to make an attack.

DROGHEDA PREPARED.

SKIRMISH NEAR THE TOWN.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

DROGHEDA, Monday Night.

Except in the neighbourhood of military positions there were no signs of warlike activtiy in Drogheda this evening. At the West Gate Barracks and other positions special precautions were taken against an attack. All the troops on duty were vigilant, and the report which was published in an evening paper that Drogheda had been captured by irregulars is very far from correct.

Some sensation was caused when it was ascertained that at 4 a.m. the Dundalk barracks had been attacked by a force estimated at between 400 and 500 men. Some of the side walls were mined and breaches were blown in them, while the gates were also rendered useless by explosions. It is stated that in this operation one of the irregulars was killed by an explosion.

When they had completed these operations the irregulars captured the garrison, with their equipment. Later on, Anne street Barrack was captured. The officers' quarters were destroyed, and the officer prisoners were detained in the other part of the building.

The irregular prisoners were then armed with rifles which had been captured in the military barracks, and even boys of tender years were provided with guns. Some of the men sported the uniform of national troops, and swaggered about as if they owned the place.

At 9.30 a.m. a train left Dundalk for the South with a strong contingent of armed irregulars. This train was protected by iron plates which had been prepared under duress in the locomotive works in Dundalk. In this way the party advanced as far as Kellystown, where they sent the tender back, blew up the railway bridge and tore up the line. At the moment they are known to be roaming about the country within a few miles of Drogheda.

Immediately on hearing of the advance the national troops took over the railway premises, sending an armed engine into Kellystown, and attacked the irregulars with machine gun fire, thus preventing them from carrying out their intention of going on to Drogheda.

It is understood that the irregulars have come from a northern area, and have been reinforced by some men from Southern districts. For strategic reasons Dunleer has been evacuated by national troops.

There have been no exchanges between the opposing forces in Drogheda. Commandant Rooney is in charge of the town, and every precaution is being taken against a surprise.

When people travelling to Belfast, Portrush, and other Northern stations, reached Drogheda this morning, they were greatly alarmed on learning that they could get no further, portions of the line having been removed by national troops in order to prevent a rush by rail on the town. The absence of telegraphic and telephonic communication north of Drogheda caused a great deal of anxiety, especially as no definite news is getting through from Dundalk. In consequence of this there is no official list of casualties. The mail train to Belfast this morning, and the goods train following it, got through Dundalk safely. It was not until they had passed through that the main line was damaged.

A Lancia car from Trim that came through Ardee reported that there was nothing remarkable in that area. It was, however, stated later that an engagement had taken place somewhere between Dunleer and Ardee, where national troops have the advantage of numbers.

During the evening considerable reinforcements arrived in Drogheda from Dublin.

THE CASUALTIES.

Our Drogheda Correspondent, telegraphing last night, states that the irregulars who attacked Dundalk numbered close on 600. They attacked the Dundalk military barracks and two of the police barracks, which were held by national troops, and captured all of them within two hours, after fierce engagements.

The whole town, including the Great Northern Railway station and locomotive works, is now in the possession of the irregulars.

Reports which have reached Drogheda put the casualties on the side of the troops at twelve killed and forty-seven wounded. No trains from Dublin are running beyond Drogheda, and only one train came from the Dundalk direction in the morning. The railway line as far as Kellystown (five miles from Drogheda) is held by irregulars. An overhead railway bridge at Kellystown has been blown up. The troops in Drogheda were very active during the day, and the guard on the railway station was strengthened.

SURPRISE ATTACK.

A Press Association telegram stated that the Dundalk garrison was completely surprised. Ann street police headquarters were first occupied and the garrison made prisoners. The jail was next attacked and all the prisoners were freed. They were mostly irregulars. The rescuing party armed the prisoners, who joined in an attack on the town. Bombs were freely thrown and fierce firing was heard. Many inhabitants fled in terror. The railway station was also seized, as well as the General Post Office. The town is completely isolated and irregulars are patrolling the streets. A party of irregulars assembled a train at the station, and with waggons containing gelignite and bombs, proceeded southwards. It is reported that several bridges between Dundalk and Drogheda have been blown up.

The first blow struck by the irregulars was at the military barracks. Bombs were placed against the gate, which was shattered to fragments by the explosion. The garrison turned out hastily to repel the intruders, and, though they were outnumbered and surprised, they put up a fight. It is stated that there were heavy casualties on both sides. Francis Byrne, a member of the Louth County Council, who was an officer of the garrison, had his legs blown off and died at Louth Infirmary. There are twenty wounded men in this institution, some of them very serious cases. It is reported there are a number dead in the military barracks, but no one is permitted to approach that place. In the jail there were a number of irregular prisoners, and after their release the Free State garrison were marched to the jail and occupied the cells lately occupied by the irregulars.

A PASSENGER'S STORY.

A gentleman, who proposed to travel to the North of Ireland yesterday, and joined the 9.15 a.m. train at Amiens street Station, said that it was a well-filled train, carrying a goodly number of people to the northern golfing resorts. The first intimation that they had that anything was wrong was when the train was stopped at Rush and Lusk Station. There word went round that there was an obstruction on the line. The train was detained for twenty minutes, but while it was waiting the local train from Dundalk to Dublin passed. Everyone said then that the supposed obstruction must have been removed, and it seemed as if the conjecture were correct, as the 9.15 was allowed to move on to Drogheda.

The true state of affairs was learned on the arrival of the train at Drogheda. All was excitement at the station, which was in possession of the national troops. The story was one of the descent of irregulars on Dundalk. The passengers were informed that at one o'clock that morning an attack had been made on Dundalk by irregulars, who had succeeded in capturing the barracks and the jail.

Brisk fighting went on all through the morning, resulting in the national forces being overcome and made prisoners. The jail was broken into, all the prisoners were released and armed, and added to the general body of the irregulars.

A plan to march on Drogheda seemed to have been formed, and when the 9.15 train from Amiens street arrived in Drogheda the head of the irregular force, it was said, could be seen with field glasses. It was said that the smoke of a train which had been "commandeered" at Dundalk could also be seen. Officers were stationed on the railway bridge, with glasses, on the look-out. It appeared fairly certain that the irregulars were, in fact, approaching Drogheda by train, and in order to check their advance the national forces in Drogheda detached the engine of the 9.15 train from Dublin and sent it forward across the Boyne Bridge with troops to a point about a quarter of a mile distant, where the rails were lifted to prevent the further approach of the irregulars by train.

The passengers of the 9.15 train were eventually returned to Dublin. It could not be ascertained at Drogheda whether the up mail train from Dublin had got through to Belfast. It was also a matter of conjecture why the irregulars allowed the local train from Dundalk to run to Dublin.

THE HOUR TO STRIKE.

DANGER OF DALLIANCE.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LIMERICK, Monday.

The national forces at the present moment have attained positions from which they can and must strike swiftly and hard. With proper energy the irregulars can be forced to fight a couple of pitched battles in which they should be defeated, and the whole war should be over in three weeks. But, on the other hand, if there is dalliance or lack of initiative, the irregulars can inflict losses upon the outlying national forces holding positions which embarrass an enemy while he is being hotly engaged in full strength, but which are quite incapable of holding out if the initiative should pass to the irregulars, who would then be able to form their own plans and concentrate in detail, instead of being forced to conform to the plans of the national forces attacking them.

The elements of the position are simple. The strength of the irregulars is in County Cork. Their base was formerly the City of Cork, and their line of defended positions ran through Dungarvan, Clonmel, Tipperary, Charleville, Newcastle West and Tralee. So long as these positions were held no advance in force was open to the national troops. So long as Cork was a secure base the irregulars could get supplies and could concentrate at will anywhere along their front. Now Cork has been captured, and the irregulars are cut off from their base. At the same time all their forward defenced positions are in the hands of their enemies, and every route is open by which they can be attacked.

THE FIVE AVENUES.

The avenues of approach to Cork City and to that portion of Mid-Cork County where the irregulars still latitant et discurrunt are five. First, there is the valley south of the Knockmealdown Mountains, stretching from Dungarvan through Lismore and along the line of the Blackwater to Fermoy. Second is the valley between the Knockmealdowns and the Ballyhoura hills, which runs from Cahir and Clonmel to Mitchelstown. This line of approach is connected with Limerick by means of Tipperary and Pallas, and can be used both by troops from General Prout's command and the command of General O'Duffy. Third is the direct road from Limerick to Cork, through Charleville and Buttevant to Mallow. Fourth and fifth are two rather difficult roads leading, the one from Abbeyfeale to Kanturk, the other from Kenmare to Macroom. The entrances to all these five approaches are now in the hands of the national forces, and the general plan of campaign is obvious.

The Cork force should, for the present, be content to consolidate its position, so that there is no danger that its strangle-hold on the communications should be loosened. Strong, swiftly-moving columns should push onwards along the three main routes, endeavouring to force an action at Mallow and Fermoy. Smaller columns from Kenmare, Abbeyfeale, and Youghal should also advance, avoiding rather than seeking a determined engagement, until they get into touch with the real attacking troops, when they will form the right and left wing of an encircling movement. But time is of the essence of the plan. If the main columns do not push forward determinedly, the irregulars may be able to avoid a battle, in which case Cork will have to be made a line of direct attack.

FIGHTING IN KERRY.

MANY IRREGULARS LEAVE KILLARNEY.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LIMERICK, Monday.

The week-end has seen much fighting in Kerry, and from reports received from Killarney it is evident that the series of ambushes and attacks prepared by the irregulars is in keeping with their usual policy of delay in order to allow the main body to make good its escape. From what I learn here, these tactics, of which the irregular leaders seem to have become masters, are proving successful. Whereas a few days ago the number of mutineers in Killarney was estimated between four and seven hundred, it is now stated to be about sixty. This band has fortified itself in the leading hotels, while the major portion, under the expert guidance of Mr. Erskine Childers, has withdrawn to the south bank of the Blackwater, where it is being sorely pressed by a national column.

A troop train was fired on by the irregulars at Farranfore. A section of the line was torn up, and when the train slowed down fire was opened on the troops by mutineers concealed in hedges. There was a brisk engagement for nearly an hour, and then the ambushers were driven off, taking their dead and wounded with them. The driver of the train and two national soldiers were wounded.

Last night a party of national troops was surrounded while on the march near Listowel by a large number of irregulars, who brought several Thompson machine guns into play. The irregular leader called on the troops to surrender. "Go to ——," replied Captain M'Grath, "we don't surrender." The engagement continued with intensity. The troops expended every round of ammunition, with the exception of five cartridges in Captain M'Grath's rifle. These he was reserving to cover the retreat as far as he could of his men. He was about to give the order to retire when the armoured car X Mutineer came rushing down the road and speedily put the irregulars to flight. A national volunteer named Quane, a native of Clare, was killed and Volunteer Costello seriously wounded.

Several prisoners who were in irregular custody in Cork are now returning to their homes in County Limerick, and tell of the depression prevalent in the ranks of their former captors. One of them mentioned that when Daniel Breen was bidding them adieu he said. "Well, you have been our prisoners. We shall probably be yours soon, and I hope you will treat us well."

FIGHT NEAR BALLINROBE.

YOUNG SOLDIER KILLED.

Clorna Castle, two miles from Ballinrobe, was on Saturday the scene of an encounter between national troops and irregulars, which resulted in one of the troops being killed. The irregulars were completely routed. The castle was occupied by the irregulars, who had trees felled across the roads. The troops, who proceeded to surround the place and clear the obstructions, were attacked from the castle with machine-guns and rifle fire.

One of the soldiers, a young man named Swift, who had only recently joined up, was shot dead, but the irregulars were put to flight. Whether they sustained casualties or not has not been ascertained.

Swift, who was a native of Kilmaine and an only son, was interred there yesterday with full military honours.

RENT COLLECTOR ROBBED.

A rent collected named Alexander Keechan, employed by Mr. J. Alfred Macauley, Alfred street, Belfast, was stopped by three men at Radnor street yesterday afternoon, and robbed of £10. One of the men was armed with a revolver.

GARRISONING THE SOUTH.

MORE TOWNS TAKEN OVER.

MINELAYERS TRAPPED.

The following official bulletin was issued from the Publicity Department, Field General Headquarters, South-Western Command, last night at 8.40 o'clock:—

CHARLEVILLE.—A detachment of troops, under Commandant-General Galvin, occupied Charleville on Sunday.

BUTTEVANT.—Troops then sent out a patrol on the road towards Buttevant, which encountered a party of irregulars in a touring car. The irregulars fled on the approach of the troops, abandoning the car.

To-day a detachment of the Dublin Guards, under Commandant Flood, moved on Buttevant. The troops engaged a party of irregulars about a mile from the town. The irregulars were caught in the act of mining the road. They had one mine actually in position, and were laying others. The troops immediately opened rifle fire on the party, upon which they decamped, leaving their motor car behind and a large number of mines and explosives. The fleeing irregulars were hotly pursued by the troops, and eleven of the party were captured, one of whom is seriously wounded. There were no casualties amongst the troops. The troops then proceeded and occupied Buttevant without further incident.

KENMARE.—On Friday morning an expedition was sent from Limerick City to Kenmare under Brigadier T. O'Connor, Commandant, Kerry No. 2 Brigade. They first encountered irregulars at Blackwater Bridge Coastguard Station, a few miles west of Kenmare. They succeeded in driving off the irregulars, landed at the coastguard station, and marched to Kenmare. On the irregulars hearing of the approach of the troops they burned the barracks and fled. A number of local leaders, including the local irregular Battalion O./C., were made prisoners.

A further expedition sent out from Limerick City arrived in Tralee, and occupied the remaining positions formerly held by the irregulars in North Kerry.

A detachment of troops under Brigadier Keane, West Limerick Brigade, occupied Drumcollogher on the 13th inst.

CAPTURED DOCUMENTS.

IRREGULARS' PLANS REVEALED.

The following official bulletin was issued from the Publicity Department, Field General Headquarters, South-Western Command, last night at 10.30 o'clock.

"Documents found on Mr. E. Enright, Cork (who styles himself 'Chief Field Engineering Inspector'), recently captured in Kinvara, Co. Galway, revealed the complete plans of the irregulars for the destruction of public and private property, the laying of road mines, the positions at which they should be laid, so as to be most effective; instructions in the cutting of railway lines, road bridges, tunnelling, etc.

"The documents were addressed to 'Major-General' Kilroy, Western Command; 'Commandant' Humphrey Murphy, Tralee; 'Commandant-General Tom Maguire, 'O.C., 3rd Western Division'; S. O'Callaghan, 'Inspecting Engineer, 1st Western Division,' etc. Among the documents captured were the following:—

(1) 'Headquarters, Fermoy, 3rd August, 1922, Department of Engineering, to O.C. Kerry No. 1 Brigade.' The following are suggestions to be acted on in connection with O.C.'s plans—(a) destroy railway line from Tralee to Listowel completely. (b) Destroy Tarbert Pier and arrange for a road-cutting section behind it to cut immediately in case of a landing there. This is important, as if a landing takes place there your men near Tralee will be caught in the rear. See to Foynes and Shannon line in case of a landing from other side. (c) Get railway line cut at Gortalea. (d) You can deal with roads round Tralee as you see fit. (e) Bearer will arrange with you if you want supplies cabled.

"S. Connolly, Assistant Div. Engineer, 1st S. Division."

"Secret" Department of Engineering, Field General H.Q., New Barracks, Limerick, July 8th.

Engineering Memorandum No. 1. Verbal instructions only.

Destruction of Enemy Essential Services.—Under the heading essential services will come water supply, light (electric and gas), heating, gas supply for cooking. Div. engineers will verbally give instructions to all brigade engineers, and the latter will verbally instruct all battalion engineers, who will instruct company engineering officers of the following matters:—

(1) Detailed information to be obtained and accurate plans made of all enemy bases, with particulars; reference as to existing means for lighting, water supply, heating installations, transport sheds, where lorries, etc., are stored, petrol and oil stores.

A special man should be detailed off for this work, whose sole duty will be the obtaining of all such information. If possible such man should be a skilled tradesman, with a knowledge of the particular line, such as a plumber, electrical engineer, or gas-fitter.

Water Supply.—It might be considered and properly thought out the best method for, say, temporarily cutting off the water supply from the enemy by turning off the stop-cock from the town main, and the removal of part of the stop-cock by taking away the square portion into which the turn-key fits, the cutting off of the water supply to be always considered with fire outbreaks. (b) The boring of holes in the pipes, and letting the water run into an old sewer, that it could not be detected on the surface of the road or street.

Pumping plants for camps; lighting by gas—Consider what might be done cutting the mains.

Electric Lighting—Destroy engines and plant, the connecting of wires to barbed wire entanglements. In all such cases great care must be taken to prevent injury to our attacking parties, and all precautions taken. Only skilled men should be employed for such work.

Forage Stores—The question of the destruction of forage stores and equipment should be gone into. All such work will tend to upset enemy movements and lessen their activities.

It is well to remember that every effort on the part of our forces tends to diminish the relative fighting value of the enemy, even though those efforts be of a minor nature. Such work should have for its objective either one or all of the following points in view:—(1) Disorganisation of the food and forage supplies to enemy establishments and garrison areas. (2) To create the greatest discomfort to enemy troops in the way of cutting off water, heating and lighting services. (3) The employment of devices, especially at night time, so as to give enemy troops as little sleep as possible, and to keep them without rest. (4) Means that could be adopted to set on fire forage stores, oil and petrol stores, transport sheds, equipments, and lorries.

DIRECTOR OF ENGINEERS.

CHURCH PARTY ATTACKED.

STREET SWEPT BY GUNFIRE.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE.)

CLONMEL, Monday.

Yesterday morning, while national troops were marching to SS. Peter and Paul's Church in Clonmel, Lewis gun fire was opened on them by an irregular outpost in the mountains overlooking the town. Volunteer Grainger, of the 2nd Dublin Brigade, was wounded in the hand, but fortunately no other casualties were caused.

At the time the street was crowded with people who were on their way to the church. The troops had scarcely turned into Gladstone street, in which the church is situated, when fire was directed on them.

They spread out in open formation, and the civilians fled for cover in all directions. The firing continued for almost three minutes, and many of the bullets ricochetted off the entrance gate of the church. Volunteer Grainger had one of his fingers almost severed from his hand. He was removed for treatment to a local hospital.

The outrage created great indignation in the town, as much innocent life might have been lost by such indiscriminate firing.

During the afternoon an irregular prisoner, who was confined in the Town Hall, excited the suspicions of a guard in the street by certain movements at one of the windows. He was repeatedly requested to leave the window, but persisted in remaining. Finally a shot was fired in his direction by a guard. The bullet entered the prisoner's head, and he was removed in an unconscious condition to hospital.

With the exception of these two incidents, the town has been quiet since the entry of the troops. Business has not yet, however, been restored to the normal. It was learned this evening that Private Grace, who is stationed in the town, was seriously wounded in Mullinahone this morning while on a visit to his home. It is said that a local irregular leader entered the house and fired point-blank at Grace, wounding him seriously in the hip.

CUNARDER DELAYED.

The Cuard Company have received a wireless advice from the Berengaria, inward bound for Cherbourg and Southampton, from New York, stating that the vessel's progress has been delayed owing to one of the propellers having sustained damage, presumably through striking some submerged wreckage. The ship will consequently be about 18 hours late in reaching Cherbourg, where she is due at noon to-day.

DEATH OF LORD NORTHCLIFFE.

A GREAT PUBLICIST.

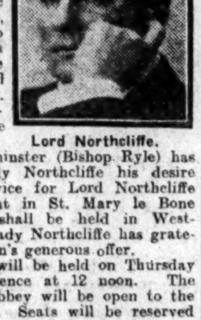
HOW NEWSPAPERS WERE REVOLUTIONISED

We regret to announce that Lord Northcliffe died yesterday morning at his London house, 1 Carlton Gardens.

Dr. Philip Seymour Price, Lord Northcliffe's medical attendant, describes his fatal illness as follows:—

"The illness from which Lord Northcliffe suffered was infective or ulcerative endocarditis. It is probable that this fatal disease began insidiously months ago. In fact, it is not improbable that it started during his recent world tour.

"The trouble made slow progress until some two months ago, when there was a considerable amount of fever, progressive weakness, and the heart was obviously becoming embarrassed.



Lord Northcliffe.

"The patient's whole being was poisoned by the germ, which was circulating in his blood. His condition steadily became worse. Infective endocarditis is usually fatal. Very few patients recover from it, and in the case of Lord Northcliffe, his extremely strenuous life, together with his war work, his world tour, his recent visit to Germany, and the noticeable loss of weight, had done much to undermine his constitution, and had lowered his resistance to such an extent that the germ streptococcus was able to find its way into the blood stream. These germs exist ordinarily in the body, but it is easy to understand that, should they find their way into the blood stream, the condition presents an extremely grave problem. This was the situation that faced Lord Northcliffe's medical advisers on his return, obviously very ill, from the Continent. Every treatment known to medical science has been tried without success. With characteristic energy and fortitude, Lord Northcliffe put up a great fight. He was aware of his grave condition, but refused to yield to the enemy. He retained consciousness almost to the end."

The Dean of Westminster (Bishop Ryle) has communicated to Lady Northcliffe his desire that the funeral Service for Lord Northcliffe prior to the interment in St. Mary le Bone Cemetery, Finchley, shall be held in Westminster Abbey, and Lady Northcliffe has gratefully accepted the Dean's generous offer.

The Abbey Service will be held on Thursday next, and will commence at 12 noon. The greater part of the Abbey will be open to the public without tickets. Seats will be reserved for relatives, personal friends, and others attending in a representative capacity. Applications for tickets for these reserved seats should be made immediately to the Private Secretary, The Times, Printing House Square, London, E.C., and not to the Abbey clergy. The interment in St. Mary le Bone Cemetery will immediately follow the Abbey Service.

A GREAT CAREER.

SKETCH OF LORD NORTHCLIFFE.

Alfred Charles William Harmsworth, first Viscount Northcliffe, was born at Chapelizod, County Dublin, on the 15th July, 1865, and was the eldest of six sons of the late Alfred Harmsworth, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, and Geraldine Mary, daughter of William Moffatt, of Pembroke place, Dublin. The childhood days of the future peer and newspaper magnate and of his brother, Lord Rothermere, who was born in 1868, were passed amid the charming surroundings of his birth place on the banks of the Liffey and adjoining the most picturesque portion of the Phœnix Park.

The father of Lord Northcliffe was in his earlier years engaged as a schoolmaster on the staff of the Royal Hibernian Military School in the Phœnix Park, and he is still remembered by some of the older officials in that institution. Subsequently the late Mr. Alfred Harmsworth was called to the English Bar, and went to reside at Hampstead, London, where some of his younger children were born. Up to the end of his successful life Lord Northcliffe retained the warmest regard for his birth place, the home of his parents, and the scenes of his childhood days, as is shown by the fact that on one of his visits to Dublin in recent years he purchased the house at Chapelizod in which he was born.

The influence of Lord Northcliffe's father in encouraging his genius for journalism was fully recognised by the son in the days of his success. On the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Daily Mail a book was published in 1921, entitled "The Mystery of the Daily Mail," giving a history of that enterprise, in which the following passage occurs:—"The Daily Mail was a young man's enterprise. Its founder, Mr. Alfred C. Harmsworth (afterwards Lord Northcliffe) was 30 years old. The son of the late Alfred Harmsworth, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, he had had the advantage of wide travel and most kinds of newspaper work. His father, as a writer of considerable distinction, had familiarised his son with literary folk and the literary life from childhood. As a boy of seven he had a small printing outfit . . . Newspaper production is one of the most technical of all callings. If the financial control is in the hands of amateurs, and these amateurs attempt to meddle, disaster usually follows. The founder of the Daily Mail was then, and is, himself a working newspaper man, and claims no other title. He has refused Cabinet office on more than one occasion. An editor at 16, he and his brother, Viscount Rothermere, had built up in his twenties the greatest publishing house in the world, the Amalgamated Press."

AN EARLY START.

Educated privately, Lord Northcliffe entered journalism at an early age, and became interested in various newspaper enterprises. One of his earlier engagements was the editorship of a cycling paper at Coventry. When still a young man he achieved his first big success with a weekly publication called Answers, which, though not a pioneer of its type, was one of the first to cater for the popular demand for light literature in the form of short stories and bright articles and paragraphs upon a variety of subjects. Answers achieved an immediate success and its financial profits laid the foundation of the fortunes of the brothers Harmsworth.

Entering daily journalism, Lord Northcliffe became proprietor of the Daily Mail, while still a very young man, and achieved a success which revolutionised the British newspaper world. As a pioneer halfpenny newspaper the Daily Mail obtained a circulation hitherto unknown as the London Press. Incidentally it introduced into British journalism elements which had hitherto been regarded foreign to it, and had been regarded with disfavour by the older style of newspapers, as being suggestive of the sensationalism of the American "yellow" Press, which was the pet aversion of English journalists of the old school, like Charles Dickens.

STRUGGLES AND TRIALS.

Lord Northcliffe was himself, at the outset of his career, familiar with the newspaper writers of the old school, and with a system of newspaper production and management which, largely through his personality and energy, has been so greatly altered in the past quarter of a century. In the course of an interesting article on "The Rise of the Daily Mail," published in that paper on the 4th May, 1916, he refers to his own early struggles, and says:—"Life as a free lance and as a descriptive writer for several of the London morning and evening newspapers and weeklies, when I was between the ages of seventeen and twenty, convinced me that the ease and laxity of their direction, their water-tight compartments, and the smug complacency ruling in what were then known as the 'great dailies,' needed, in the national interest, an awakening. So far as the morning Press was concerned, there had been very few radical changes since the grandfather of the present Lord Burnham dropped a bomb in Fleet street by issuing a live and complete newspaper at a penny in 1855.

"As I went in and out of these newspaper offices I found that their organisations were so constructed that one could never convey an idea to the man at the top. Contact with the staff was, as a rule, by postcard. There were rumours in Fleet street about high and mighty personages who surrounded the editor, and once I did get as near to these great gentlemen as a talk with the late George Augustus Sala, who strongly advised me to have nothing to do with journalism. He had been at it for forty years, and knew."

GETTING INTO TOUCH.

And then he goes on to tell us, with a touch of humour, how he actually did get into touch with one of the high and mighty, in the person of the editor-in-chief of the Morning Post, Sir William Hardman. "But I did not do so by the avenue of Fleet street," says Lord Northcliffe. "My father and Sir William Hardman, who was also Chairman of Quarter Sessions, were contemporaries at the Bar, and Sir William gave me advice strongly resembling that of Mr. Sala. My father himself decidedly shared their views, and urged that I should abandon the Street of Adventure for Pump Court."

ALLIES FAIL TO AGREE.

LONDON CONFERENCE CONCLUDED.

M. POINCARÉ SAYS NO MORATORIUM.

FRANCE IN MINORITY OF ONE.

It was officially announced last night that the London Conference of Allies to discuss Germany's request for a moratorium in respect of reparations payments had failed to reach an agreement and that the foreign delegates will return to their respective capitals to-day.

In the words of M. Poincaré, the delegates have "agreed to disagree."

Mr. Lloyd George wished to submit the matters in dispute to the League of Nations, but M. Poincaré could not assent to this proposal, and said that he would have to consult his Government.

It was generally agreed that the German clearing-house payment of £2,000,000, due to-day, should be suspended for one month, and that afterwards the various Governments should make separate arrangements with the German Government in the matter of this payment, subject to the approval of the Reparations Commission.

M. Poincaré and M. Theunis said that they agreed to this latter proposal for the sake of Allied unity.

FRANCE STANDS ALONE.

ALL "DELAY" PROPOSALS REJECTED.

From the official statement issued last night it appears that on Sunday, after discussing the situation with M. Poincaré and M. Theunis, Signor Schanzer went down to the country to discuss the position with Mr. Lloyd George.

The Italian Minister proposed that the whole discussion should be adjourned until after the various countries had carried out funding arrangements with the United States.

It was understood on Sunday that M. Poincaré had agreed to this suggestion, and that Great Britain was quite prepared to agree also, leaving the date uncertain.

When the discussion was resumed yesterday morning, M. Poincaré said that he was quite prepared to accept the Italian suggestion, provided that no moratorium was granted in the meantime.

All the other Governments represented thought that this condition was impracticable, and Signor Schanzer then proposed that there should be a moratorium for two months.

M. Poincaré said that he could not accept an unconditional moratorium of any kind.

Mr. Lloyd George then proposed:—

(1) The adoption of the Italian suggestion of an adjournment till the latter part of the year.

(2) The leaving of the question of a moratorium or no moratorium to be decided by the Reparations Commission.

(3) An agreement that the guarantees already demanded by the Committee of Guarantees and accepted by the German Government should be applied immediately.

(4) Great Britain would undertake to make no charges for interest or principal from the Allied debtors pending a meeting at the end of the year.

These proposals were supported by all the Allies except M. Poincaré, who expressed much regret that he was unable to accept.

Mr. Lloyd George said that he was afraid no agreement was possible, and suggested that the whole subject should be left to the League of Nations; otherwise, they must agree to disagree.

All the other delegates present took the same view, and M. Poincaré, in consenting to an agreement to disagree, said that he would have to consider the situation with his Government.

A meeting of the British Cabinet was held after the Conference, and the line taken by Mr. Lloyd George was unanimously approved.

PAYMENTS IN SUSPENSE.

PARIS, Monday.

The Reparations Commission has issued the following Note:—

"The Reparations Commission unanimously decided at its sitting this morning to send the following letter to the German Government:—

"Contrary to the hope expressed in the letter of July 13, the Commission is not in a position to inform you before August 15 of the decision in connection with your memorandum of July 12. The decision will be communicated to you at an early date, and you will be informed at the same time regarding the question of the payment due on August 15, which will remain in suspense until the decision is taken. (Signed) Louis Dubois, John Bradbury."

EFFECT ON THE ENTENTE.

"A DIFFICULT SITUATION."

PARIS, Monday.

Precisely what the collapse of the London Conference means it is too early to say. There is an unmistakable deprecation of any tragic interpretation of the disagreement of France and Great Britain. Clearly the Entente must suffer, but it is trusted that wise counsels will prevent any final separation of the two countries. They must come together again, and act in common accord for the salvation of Europe.

A heavy slump of the exchanges appears inevitable. Nevertheless, although it is impossible to take a cheerful view, it is believed that France will not rush to extremes, and will allow the Reparations Commission to deal with a difficult situation.—The Times Correspondent.

DEPORTEES FROM ALSACE.

BERLIN, Monday.

According to the newspaper accounts of the arrival in German territory of Germans expelled from Alsace-Lorraine, many of the deportees were taken out of their beds between 5 and 6 and conducted to the local police station, where they were notified that they were to be expelled. Most of them, the German accounts say, are ordinary people, including workmen, clerks, waitresses, and shopkeepers—in short, people who have no connection with politics, and among them are men and women between 75 and 80. Many of them are absolutely penniless. Their houses and furniture have been sequestrated, and they themselves were searched in order that the authorities might be certain that they had no more than the prescribed sum of money.—(Reuter.)

ADRIATIC AT NEW YORK.

CAUSE OF EXPLOSION UNKNOWN.

NEW YORK, Sunday.

The Adriatic docked at 4.30 this afternoon. Captain David, her commander, stated that he did not know the cause of the explosion, which occurred forward of the bridge in the hold nearest to the keel, fifty feet below the main deck, in a pile of coal.

Passengers spoke of the heroism of Mr. J. Carrigan, of Liverpool, the senior second engineer, who crawled from a bulkhead into the gas-filled hold, and rescued one of his men and extinguished the flames.

So quickly was the explosion over and the danger averted that only a few first-class passengers on the starboard side were awakened. Those on the port side and the second and third class passengers remained undisturbed.—(Reuter.)

THE HORSE SHOW.

HOPEFUL PROSPECTS.

RAILWAY FACILITIES.

WEATHER FORECAST.

General Inference.—A depression over France may cause some rain or thundery showers in the extreme south-east. In other districts weather will be fair to cloudy, except on the North-West Seaboard, where rain is likely, under the influence of a new depression indicated south-west of Iceland.

North-West Ireland.—Wind west to south-west, light or moderate, cloudy to dull, some rain or showers; visibility mainly good; moderate temperature.

North-East, South-East, and South-West Ireland.—Light west or indefinite wind, fair to cloudy, some morning mist; day visibility good; moderate temperature.

The Royal Dublin Society's annual Horse Show will be opened to-day in the famous premises at Ballsbridge.

The entire Irish public, and hundreds of people from other lands who have always taken an interest in these exhibitions, commend the enterprise and courage of the Society in preparing for, and pushing on, the Show in face of circumstances which might well dishearten the promoters of other worthy undertakings. All the indications warrant the belief that this year's Show will prove a great success. In the first place, the entry of competing horses is quite equal to the best record in the past. The jumping, the bloodstock sales, the hunter sales, and other concomitants of the Show, including the Village Industries Exhibition, and the Irish Art Industries, will present attractions for the public which can hardly fail to justify the confidence of the Society.

The streets of the city yesterday presented an animated appearance. Hundreds of visitors from different parts of Ireland, from Great Britain, and even from the Continent and from America have arrived, and the hotels are already crowded. It is on occasions like this that the loss of the four or five commodious and comfortable hotels which were destroyed in the centre of the city last month must be felt. Visitors have had to seek accommodation in private boardinghouses and at hotels in the adjacent townships and suburbs.

The Leopardstown Races yesterday drew a large proportion of the visitors out of town, but there were still enough left to increase materially the throng in Grafton street, in Sackville street, and other central thoroughfares.

The Showyard opens to-day at 9 o'clock, and the judging of the horses will begin at 10 o'clock. The last of all the horses that have been entered arrived yesterday, and it was a matter of much gratification to the members of the Society, to horse-owners, and the general public to receive the announcement of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company that the road was opened for the conveyance of horses from the South and South-West. Trains ran yesterday from Limerick and Newcastle-West and from Dundrum, Co. Tipperary.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME.

4.30 p.m. to 6.0 p.m.—Demonstration by Irish Countryside Workers in Pavilion adjoining Veterinary Paddock.

6. 0 p.m.—Show Yard Closes.

In respect to the funeral of Mr. Arthur Griffith, the Show will not be opened to-morrow until 2 o'clock.

RAILWAYS AND THE SHOW.

Except on the Great Northern Railway, on which the permanent way has been interfered with for military purposes, thus interrupting traffic beyond Drogheda, the railway companies in the South-West and Eastern areas will be able to cater adequately for the Show, and it is not anticipated that the attendance or the display of exhibits will be affected to any considerable extent.

There is a full through service between the Broadstone and Galway, Sligo and Westport, on the Midland Great Western Railway, but in the running between Galway and Clifden, Westport and Achill, the interruption of traffic continues.

As will be observed from our advertising columns, the service on the Great Southern and Western Railway has been resumed between Dublin, Limerick, and Waterford, and many important towns which were isolated during the recent trouble. The renewal of services in the South and West, with the exception of parts of the counties of Cork and Kerry, will facilitate visitors and exhibitors in coming and sending to the Horse Show. Communication by telegraph and telephone with some districts is restricted.

Although considerable repairs remain to be carried out north of Athenry and in the County Waterford, the work on bridges, etc., is being pressed forward, and an early resumption of running in the remaining districts is expected. Large quantities of goods are being handled at the Kingsbridge, and in order to avoid congestion traders should tender traffic as early as possible.

Up till last night a full normal train service was run on the main line and branches of the Dublin and South-Eastern Railway as for some time past, and it is hoped that it will be maintained.

AMERICAN RAILWAY CHAOS.

STRIKERS' VIOLENCE.

The situation on the far western railways of America continues chaotic as the result of the strike, and many trains are in the sheds because the strikers refuse to man them. They consented, however, to move six trains, which for several days were marooned at deserted points, to places of less discomfort.

President Harding has telegraphed to the Governor of Arizona offering the assistance of the Federal Government for the relief of the hardships of the marooned passengers.

Fifteen locomotives of the Maine Central Railway, together with a round house, were yesterday destroyed by fire. The police attribute the destruction to incendiarism.

A telegram from North Bergen, New Jersey, says that three bombs were hurled at a passenger train while it was crossing a culvert on Sunday, shattering the windows of three coaches, and injuring ten passengers.

The Railway Executives left Washington late on Sunday evening convinced that the strike will continue. They state that they did not expect that the Government would attempt any further compromise. The Union leaders, however, are remaining at Washington for the purpose of continuing their efforts at mediation between the striking shopmen on the one hand, and Government and railway managements on the other.—(Reuter.)

BROTHERS DIE TOGETHER.

The death of two brothers, well-known throughout Swansea Valley, occurred within a few hours of one another. Dr. John Jones, of Clydach, who had been ill for some weeks, died yesterday morning, aged 57. His brother, Evan Jones, postmaster of Clydach, Swansea Valley, had a fatal seizure and dropped dead while fetching another doctor to attend his brother.

SIGNOR D'ANNUNZIO'S FALL

SERIOUS INJURY TO HEAD.

GARDONE, RIVIERA, Monday.

Signor Gabrielle d'Annunzio, while walking in the garden of his villa yesterday evening, had a fall as a result of which he received rather serious injuries to his head. For some time the poet's condition gave rise to anxiety. Medical reports are now more reassuring, though the doctors decline to express a definite opinion about the patient's condition. A bulletin says that there are signs of a fracture of the base of the skull, and there are some signs of concussion of the brain.—(Reuter.)

FROM TO-DAY'S LONDON PAPERS.

LONDON CONFERENCE.

A LAMENTABLE FAILURE.

"THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY SAYS:—

The meeting in Downing street has failed, and in its failure has covered with discredit most, if not all, of those who took part in it. None of them was able to rise to the height of what might have been a great opportunity to put the feet of Europe on the road towards recovery and to set the world an abiding example in statesmanship. Of excuses and explanations there will, doubtless, be many. Recriminations there may be and essays in self-defence. But none of these efforts will avail to hide the plain fact that the politicians responsible for the welfare of the Allied peoples met in London three full years after the peace, and showed themselves unworthy of their trust.

Whatever view the French nation may take of the action and attitude of its representatives, we should be surprised were the British nation not to regard yesterday's lamentable failure as one more proof that the Coalition Government has outlived its mandate and outstayed its welcome, and that new men are needed to face a situation which present Ministers have needlessly, if not hopelessly, compromised.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE.

INSTINCTIVE INSIGHT.

In a leading article The Times observes:—The death of Lord Northcliffe, which we record with deep sorrow this morning, is an event of more than national import. Lord Northcliffe's greatness and, indeed, his genius are beyond question. To his personality none who came into touch with him could be indifferent. Many it attracted, some it repelled; but all felt its power. Yet his energy, his "drive," and on occasion his vehemence were merely the most conspicuous of his many remarkable qualities. More truly characteristic of him was what he often called his "sixth sense"—the faculty of divining the course of things, the instinctive insight that enabled him not only to apprehend, but to feel, as present realities events still in the making.

To the Empire he was devoted heart and soul. The knowledge of Imperial questions and the keen interest in the welfare of the Dominions that he showed during his recent journey round the world were the outcome of protracted inquiry and thought. Hardly less intense was his realisation of the need for relations of the most cordial frankness between Great Britain and the United States. The secret of "getting on" with Americans he guessed instinctively. He liked them. They knew it and returned his liking. His death severs a strong personal link between the public opinion of this country and that of the United States.

In the history of this journal his name can never be forgotten, adds The Times. One of the ambitions of his early life—no mean ambition—was to control it. He believed in it as a national institution, of which the potency for good must, in large measure, depend upon its power to keep abreast of public movements and changes in current modes of thought.

Of him it may be said that with his virtues and his faults, his achievements and his errors, he was a man in the full sense of the word—a man, moreover, animated by high public spirit, and inspired by a strong sense of public duty.

A DOCTOR'S CRIME.

REMARKABLE AUSTRALIAN CASE.

The Times Melbourne Correspondent states:—At Hampton, a seaside suburb of Melbourne, a crime of unusual character and causing the death of five people has been committed. In this suburb lived Dr. G. E. Cranstoun and his family. One of his women patients, who on calling at the surgery was unable to obtain admission, suspected that something was amiss. She communicated her suspicions to the police, who forcibly entered the house. There they found Dr. Cranstoun lying in the hall unconscious, with a hypodermic syringe by his side.

Continuing their search, they discovered Mrs. Cranstoun. She was lying on her bed, fully dressed, and seriously ill. In an attic were two young sons dead, while another son lay clothed on the hearthrug in the drawingroom. He died a few minutes after being found. Two daughters, both young, were found seriously ill in their own room. Miss Gladys Baylis, companion to Mrs. Cranstoun, was dead in her bed.

On the floor was an envelope addressed to her from Balliol College, Oxford. The wrists of all the victims except Miss Baylis were punctured. Those members of the family who were still alive were taken to hospital. Dr. Cranstoun died soon after he was admitted there. Mrs. Cranstoun and her two daughters are expected to recover. The cause of death has been diagnosed as morphine poisoning. Dr. Cranstoun, who frequently attended races, is said to have been in financial difficulties.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

NO SELLING PRESSURE.

The Stock Markets opened steady yesterday, and investment brokers reported a quite fair amount of business for this season of the year, states The Times. Paris was closed, which tended to restrict dealings in South African Shares and in the Foreign market. On the news of the breakdown of the Reparations Conference the general tendency of markets became dull, but there were no signs of selling pressure.

THE CONFERENCE FAILURE.

The expected breakdown of the London Conference is now an accomplished fact. It is grave news, remarks the Daily News, and we have no wish to minimise its gravity. What is now to happen we do not profess to know, but the matter is of too much urgency to be dismissed by the British Prime Minister's final words of resignation, "I am afraid we must agree to disagree." The last word has not been said, and we think it remains for Great Britain to say it. We believe if the British Government were willing even at this late moment to offer to remit the whole of the French war debt—indeed all the war debts of our European Allies—in return for a more reasonable view of German reparations, that a critical situation would be at once transformed into one of great hope for Europe.

The Daily Mail says:—It is sad, after all these years of loyal comradeship and after the fearful sacrifices and trials of the war, endured in common, to find that the partners to the Entente are diverging more and more. The only prospect of avoiding a final breach, such as Mr. Lloyd George's language to M. Poincaré appears to have suggested, lies in postponement of the reparations question to another conference. To such a pass has it come that Frenchmen can sincerely, although mistakenly, accuse the British Government of championing Germany, the enemy and disturber of peace, against France, Great Britain's ally. There must be a determined effort to clear away the clouds of misunderstanding, and it should be made by the British Government, which has so far expected France to concede at every point, and surrender precious French interests.

So diplomacy by conference has broken down, comments the Daily Express. Failure to agree has not been due to a quarrel over the mines and forests of the Ruhr any more than our Premier's trip to Chequers which so offended some of our French guests. The causes of the cleavage lie far deeper. We refuse to believe that because the statesmen have failed to agree the Entente Cordiale is ended. It is a moment to weigh words well, and to refrain from hasty conclusions. We shall continue until the twelfth hour to have faith that our great Ally will take counsel of reason and sobriety, and not act against her own best interests.

As a mark of respect to the memory of the late President Arthur Griffith, the Government has ordered that all Government departments in Dublin shall remain closed on Wednesday until 2 p.m.

It is the wish of Mr. Griffith's family that no flowers be sent.

THE LYING IN STATE.

MOURNING IN CITY AND COUNTRY.

Signs of mourning for the death of Mr. Arthur Griffith were general throughout Dublin yesterday. Over the Irish Government departments and public buildings, and at the Consulates, flags were flown at half-mast, while the blinds in the Irish Government buildings were drawn.

Among the general public there were also evidences of sorrow at the sudden end of a man who, up to the moment when he was stricken down, played so large a part in Irish politics.

When the doors of the City Hall were opened to the general public yesterday morning for the lying in state, a continuous stream of people passed by the catafalque.

A guard of honour of national soldiers, with arms reversed, stood at the coffin, and soldiers were on duty outside the building, with a force of Dublin Metropolitan Police.

There was a very large attendance of the general public during the day. The people were formed into a long queue along Dame street, and passed in a continuous and uninterrupted stream through the barriers. Despite the thousands of visitors to the City Hall there was no congestion of traffic.

The lying in state at the City Hall will be continued to-day until 7.30 p.m., when the coffin will be removed to the Pro-Cathedral.

Dr. Byrne, Archbishop of Dublin, will preside at the solemn Requiem High Mass in the Pro-Cathedral at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, and the funeral take place to Glasnevin Cemetery.

WORLD-WIDE SYMPATHY.

PUBLIC BODIES' RESOLUTIONS.

Messages of sympathy have been received at the offices of the Irish Provisional Government in Dublin, and at Mrs. Arthur Griffith's house in Clontarf, from all over Ireland, Great Britain and America.

Several public bodies have passed resolutions expressing a sense of the deep loss that Ireland has sustained through the passing of the Irish leader and champion of the Treaty.

Pembroke (Dublin) Urban District Council, at a meeting yesterday afternoon, passed a resolu tion tendering to the Provisional Government and relatives of the late Mr. Griffith its sincere sympathy in the great loss that they had sustained by the death of one of Ireland's best and most faithful sons. The meeting adjourned without transacting any business.

The Council of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce met yesterday and passed a resolution requesting the honorary officers of the Chamber to attend the funeral as representing the organisation, and tendering sympathy to the relatives.

The Joint Committee of the Meath Hospital and County Dublin Infirmary has placed on record its profound regret at the death of Mr. Griffith. It recognises "that Mr. Griffith was a distinguished and a patriotic Irishman, whose premature death at the present juncture with the affairs of Ireland is a grievous blow to the country." The Committee conveys to Mr. Griffith's family, and to his colleagues in the Provisional Government of the Irish Free State and in Dail Eireann, its condolence and sympathy.

The Irish Railway Workers' Trade Union has tendered to Mrs. Griffith and family "profound sympathy for the irreparable loss that they have sustained."

A mass meeting of Civil Servants convened by the Civil Service Federation at Ierne Hall, Rutland square, Dublin, last night for the purpose of dealing with various matters expressed its very deep grief at the death of such a great Irishman. The meeting passed a resolution speaking of the Civil Servants deep sorrow at the irreparable loss the Irish nation had sustained.

BRITISH ORGANISATIONS.

The "Michael Davitt" Branch of the United Irish League, Manchester, has telegraphed to Mr. Collins an expression of its deep sympathy with the family of the late Mr. Griffith in its great loss.

Irish persons of Tyneside have telegraphed from the Irish National Club, Newcastle-on-Tyne, deep sympathy with the nation.

Heart-felt sympathy with Mrs. Griffith is sent by the North Staffordshire Irish Reunion Committee.

Irishmen of Huddersfield have sent a message of condolence.

CONSULATES IN DUBLIN.

Sympathy has been tendered to the Provisional Government and Mrs. Arthur Griffith by the Consulates in Dublin of Belgium, Finland, Norway, Portugal, and Spain.

JEWISH COMMUNITY.

Dr. Isaac Herzog, Chief Rabbi of the Jewish Community of Dublin, has telegraphed:—

"Please accept, on behalf of our Community, the expression of our profound grief on the serious loss sustained by the Irish nation through the death of Mr. Arthur Griffith, President of the Dail, a great Irish patriot, leader, and statesman."

EAST CAVAN CONSTITUENCY.

The death of Mr. Griffith caused deep regret in East Cavan, the constituency which he had represented since the by-election of June, 1918. All sections of political opinion joined in an expression of sorrow at the passing away of a great leader.

His old political opponents in Bailieborough, and elsewhere in East Cavan, say that his death at the present juncture in Irish history is a national loss, and pay tribute in eloquent terms to his patriotism and sincerity, and especially to his great work since the signing of the Treaty.

The flag on the local barracks flies at half-mast, while mourning flags are placed over other buildings. Prayers for the soul of the dead statesman were offered up at the different Masses on Sunday.

The news was heard with great regret in Kingscourt; Mullagh also heard the news with sorrow, as did Virginia and Ballyjamesduff. A mourning flag flies at half-mast on the barracks in the towns. Prayers were offered at all the Masses in the constituency.

IN THE PROVINCES.

In County Wexford, where Mr. Griffith was well known in Gaelic League circles, apart from the political sphere, his death aroused widespread sorrow, and sympathy for Mrs. Griffith and family. His death is referred to as a national calamity. Flags fly at half-mast in the harbour.

When the sad news reached Boyle on Saturday much grief was shown by the people there. Prayers were offered for the repose of his soul at the Masses in Boyle on Sunday, and his death was spoken of as a great national calamity. In political and commercial circles in Boyle the expression was generally heard that it will be hard to fill the place of such a sane and moderate statesman.

Speaking at 11 o'clock Mass in the Abbey Church, Galway, on Sunday, Father Bernard said that the country would hear of Mr. Griffith's death with regret. He was the father and founder of Sinn Fein, and his whole life was spent in awakening the soul of Ireland to her national aspirations. At the present time his tragic death was more in the nature of a national calamity, as he was always a man of peace.

A specially convened meeting of Sligo Corporation yesterday passed a motion recording that "This Corporation deeply regrets the death of Mr. Arthur Griffith and places an expression of our appreciation on record for the invaluable services rendered by him to the Irish nation."

Rathdrum, Co. Wicklow, adjourned its meeting yesterday as a mark of sympathy.

Ballinasloe Asylum Committee also adjourned yesterday, and expressed "sincere sorrow with his widow and relatives."

Queen's County County Council meeting adjourned yesterday as a mark of respect.

Cork Harbour Commissioners have conveyed to the Provisional Government an expression of sympathy and condolence in the loss sustained by the country.

The people of Clonmel, says our Correspondent, deeply deplore the loss of the Irish leader.

Clones people of all creeds were profoundly shocked by the news, and many signs of public mourning are displayed.

LIMERICK'S SORROW.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)
LIMERICK, Monday.

The shock caused by the announcement of Mr. Griffith's death has overshadowed the military situation here during the week-end. It has created profound sorrow among citizens of all sections, and they deplore his passing at this critical juncture as a grave national loss.

To no one has it come as a greater shock than to his colleague, General Michael Collins, who, in his capacity as Commander-in-Chief of the national forces, has been paying a visit of inspection of the advanced military positions in the South-Western Command, and to whom the painful news was broken during his tour.

In the various quarters where the troops are stationed the following notice has been displayed by order of General O'Duffy:—

"In respect to the late President, the troops will, as far as possible, preserve silence in the orderly rooms, and refrain from all amusements and recreations."

The Deputy Mayor of the city and all other leading citizens have telegraphed their condolences to Mrs. Griffith and the Irish Government. A Requiem Mass was celebrated this morning in St. John's Cathedral. There was a very large congregation, among whom was General Collins, General Owen O'Duffy, and 300 troops.

PERSONAL CONDOLENCES.

MR. CHURCHILL'S MESSAGE.

Mr. A. Cope, Assistant Under-Secretary for Ireland, wrote to Mr. Cosgrave yesterday:—

"Mr. Churchill, who is abroad, only learned the sad news yesterday. He wishes me to convey to Mr. Collins and his colleagues, and also to Mrs. A. Griffith, his deepest regret and sympathy in their heavy loss.

"Would you kindly convey Mr. Churchill's sympathy to Mrs. Arthur Griffith?"

Sir James Craig telegraphed from London to the Acting Chairman of the Government:—

"Your telegram followed us from Belfast. I deeply regret to learn of the sudden death of your President, Mr. Arthur Griffith. The loss of his judgment and counsel will be greatly felt by Mr. Collins and his colleagues, to whom I tender sincere sympathy."

Lord and Lady Aberdeen have telegraphed to the Lord Mayor of Dublin—"Please convey to Dail and to Mrs. Griffith our heartfelt sympathy and expression of our deep sorrow in the nation's grievous loss."

Messages of sympathy have also been received from the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland and the Pharmaceutical Society of Ireland.

AMERICAN TRIBUTE.

NEW YORK, Monday.

In an article of tribute to Mr. Arthur Griffith, the New York Times says:—His sudden death is a greater loss to Ireland than the devastation wrought by the defeated rebels. The Provisional Government can make no better resolve than to carry on the onerous work of Mr. Griffith in his spirit.

The World also speaks of the gravity of the loss which Ireland has sustained through the death of Mr. Griffith.—(Reuter.)

THE POPE'S SORROW.

ROME, Monday.

The Pope has sent a telegram to Mrs. Griffith expressing profound sorrow at the death of Mr. Arthur Griffith.—(Reuter.)

Sergeant Purdy was accidentally killed in County Limerick, and the other seven were victims of the fighting in Cork.

The bodies had been brought to Dublin by the Irish Lights Commissioners' steamer Alexandra, which arrived at the North Wall on Saturday. The coffins containing the remains were carried in motor vehicles to Portobello Barracks.

Yesterday morning Requiem Mass was celebrated in the library of the barracks by the Rev. Father Concannon, C.F.

There was a large attendance of relatives, friends, and sympathisers, as well as the general public, at the barracks and, later, in the cemetery at Glasnevin, where the interment took place.

The chief mourners were:—Of the brothers McKenna—Mrs. McKenna (mother), Mr. R. McKenna (brother).

CASTLEBAR AMBUSH.

SOLDIER SHOT DEAD.

At 2 o'clock on Saturday morning troops were ambushed on the Mall, in Castlebar, and Volunteer James Duffy (21), a native of Clara, Offaly, was shot dead. Quartermaster Finan, Volunteer Chris. Devaney, and Volunteer William Murray were wounded.

Shortly before 2 o'clock the house of Mr. William Connell, Ellison street, which faces the Mall, was forcibly entered by five or six armed men, and at about the same hour the house of Mrs. Catherine Bourke, at the junction of Linenhall and Rush streets, at the other end of the town, and which commands a view of Main street, Rush street, Lucan street, and Linenhall street, was similarly entered.

A picket of the national troops was on duty in the town, and the men were divided at the head of Main street, one section going to visit the guard at the Imperial Hotel. Coming around by the Protestant church, according to the evidence of Volunteer William Murray, at the inquest, Duffy and himself heard the challenge—"Who goes there?" Duffy replied, "Friends," and the voice then said, "Advance, one." Duffy advanced, and just as he reached the opposite side of the road, at the entrance to the Mall, he was shot. The witness was wounded in the subsequent firing. Quartermaster Finan and Volunteer Devaney, on hearing the firing, came from the direction of the hotel, and they were also wounded. When the quartermaster fell he fired one shot, and his comrade also fired.

Doctor A. MacBride, Resident Surgeon of the Infirmary, deposed that Duffy was dead when he was brought in. The bullet entered between the third and fourth ribs. Death was due to hemorrhage from the large vessels at the root of his right lung.

Messrs. William Connell, manager Castlebar Bacon Factory, and Frank Bourke, gave evidence of the seizing of their houses by men whom they believed to be armed irregulars.

Mr. A. V. G. Thornton, solicitor, who appeared for the military, asked for a verdict of wilful murder, as the deceased man met his death at the hands of the irregulars.

Mr. A. Hynes (a juror)—Call them rebels; irregulars is too mild a term for them.

The jury found that deceased died from bullet wounds, inflicted by some person or persons unknown, and expressed sympathy with deceased man's parents and friends.

Mr. Thornton, Commandant M. M'Hugh, and the Coroner joined in the vote of condolence.

WATER[illegible]'S TRIBUTE.

WARM PRAISE OF MR. GRI[illegible]H.

At a special meeting of Waterford Corporation, held last night, the following resolution was proposed by Dr. V. J. White, T.D., Mayor: "That we, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of the County Borough of Waterford, hereby respectfully tender to the widow and relatives of the late Mr. Arthur Griffith, President of Dail Eireann, our deep sympathy in their sad bereavement. We desire to place on record our sincere appreciation of his noble life, spent in the service of his beloved country, and of his many sacrifices and sufferings in her cause. We wish especially to pay an humble tribute to his conspicuous ability as a national leader in conducting successfully the recent negotiations with the English Cabinet, which eventuated in bringing about the Anglo-Irish Treaty. With the rest of Ireland we deeply mourn his loss, which is peculiarly tragic, occurring at a time when the country is about to enjoy the fruition of his lifelong labours."

MAYOR'S APPRECIATION.

In speaking to the resolution, the Mayor said that it was a good many years ago since he had the pleasure of meeting Arthur Griffith in Dublin. He was a man of charming personality, of a retiring disposition, and was a sincere and solid friend.

It was now about thirty years since Arthur Griffith first began working for the liberty of his beloved country. During all that time his efforts for Irish freedom had been untiring. His work was not a work that was constantly in the limelight. For twenty years he did the spadework unobtrusively and steadily. He did not live to see that work consummated, but he had certainly laid solid foundations on which they could erect a prosperous and an independent Ireland. He did not think it could be denied that Arthur Griffith was the super-leader in Irish politics for very many years. His medical advisers and friends advised him recently to take a rest, but owing to the disturbed state of the country he did not do so.

SHOPS TO CLOSE.

The Corporation decided to request traders to close their business premises during the funeral obsequies in Dublin. Solemn Requiem Office and High Mass will be celebrated at Waterford Cathedral on Friday next for the repose of the soul of the deceased.

The tricolour was lowered to half-mast on all public buildings in Waterford yesterday.

EGYPTIAN CABINET CRISIS.

ALEXANDRIA, Monday.

The Ministerial crisis has been settled, and the Government is not resigning. There is to be a meeting of the Cabinet to-morrow. It is understood that the crisis was acute yesterday evening, when the resignation was imminent. No statement is made, however, regarding the cause of the crisis.—(Reuter.)

THE CAPTURE OF KENMARE.

IRREGULARS GO OFF IN A TRAIN.

THEIR TALE OF GREAT SLAUGHTER.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)
KENMARE, August 11th, 9 p.m.

At 8 o'clock in the morning of last Thursday the steamer Margret, a coastwise vessel of about 600 tons burden, lay at the South quays of Limerick. Her cargo consisted of butter, eggs, and other perishable foodstuffs for the cross-Channel market, and, in addition, she carried a deck cargo of raw hides and sheepskins but lately flayed from the carcases they had sheltered, and now, each tied in a separate bundle, lying in piles all over the deck in front of the bridge. Steam was up, and she was apparently an ordinary vessel just about to clear. The only thing which would have called the attention of an observer was a bundle of sacks lying on the after-hatch, whose open mouths showed them to be filled with earth.

Presently a lorry came down the quay and unloaded a huge wooden box, containing hundreds of freshly-baked loaves, a couple of boxes of butter, and a quantity of brawn and other tinned meats. A few minutes later and a couple of generals arrive, followed shortly after by the Commander-in-Chief. The vessel had become a centre of interest. At half-past eight the secret was fully revealed, as down the quay drove a number of lorries laden with very dusty soldiery, who, on dismounting from the lorries, formed up in line, and, on the word of command, filed on board the boat, where they distributed themselves somewhat at random over the decks and hatches. The wiser of them avoided the apparent softness of the hides, and those who chose them as a couch did not remain long, as when their sense of smell became blunted another sense quickly assured them that there were certain disadvantages in mattresses of this nature.

OUT TO SEA.

Time was now running short and the tide, which had turned an hour before, was ebbing fast, rendering it necessary for the Margret, a vessel drawing about 12 feet, to clear at once. The anchor was weighed, and General MacManus, who was in charge of the expedition, came on board. The vessel was warped out into the middle of the river, cheers arose, and one excitable officer announced his joy by firing the contents of his revolver into the air. We were off.

The expedition, a secret which had been well kept, was planned to make a descent upon the town of Kenmare, which lies at the head of that long arm of the sea known as Kenmare River. A glance at the map shows that in such an attempt danger is to be anticipated, as for 12 miles of its course the estuary is less than a mile wide, and a vessel proceeding up the centre is within easy rifle shot of the land on either side. Troops crowded on board a ship form a target which is very vulnerable, and not easy to miss, and the final operation of transferring them to boats and landing them upon an enemy shore is the most difficult of all war manœuvres.

The Margaret steamed away down the channel of the Shannon at a speed of about 12 knots. The tide was with us, and in spite of the tortuous nature of the channel, which winds now under one bank of the river, now under the other, we made good time to Ballylongford. Here we had to wait for our consort, the Mermaid, a river pleasure boat of only three feet draught, whose mission till lately had been to bear sightseers up and down the lower reaches of the Thames. She had not been ready to start as soon as we were, and had to remain behind, her light draught enabling her to come down the river when the tide was low. In the late afternoon she came paddling along beside us and, as her speed was inferior to our own, was taken in tow.

MEALS ON BOARD.

Meanwhile the troops had been settling down with the aid of the rations, two concertinas, and a fiddle. They had managed to get rid of the dust of their land journey, and seemed to occupy most of their time in an orgy of feasting. The favourite method was to cut a loaf in two, put about half a pound of butter in the middle, and then eat away till nature revolted, and the remainder of the loaf was cast to the seagulls or trampled on the deck. Round by the galley a seemingly unceasing stream of men held out mugs into which they had put a mixture of tea and sugar. Boiling water was poured in, and the resulting mixture apparently gave satisfaction. After eating the men fell asleep in masses over the hatches, the gangways, and every conceivable flat portion of the ship, rousing themselves at odd moments to fire a shot at a cormorant, to sing a song, or to discourage a casual visitor from the sheepskins.

Below Ballylongford the Shannon widens rapidly, and the shore, which up to this has been that of a river estuary, now takes on the nature of a sea coast. From Ballybunion to Kerry Head runs a line of cliffs, not of great height, but of wild ruggedness. The now westering sun threw black shadows from pinnacles and outlying masses on the warm brows of the rock. Away to the north Loop Head showed like a line of purple passe-partout fanning the face of the sea, and, in spite of the extreme calmness of the day, the slow lift and fall of the Atlantic swell began to be felt. The Mermaid, especially, did not seem at all at home in her native element, and towed very badly, yawing from side to side in a fidgetty manner which put a great strain upon the tow ropes. Several efforts were made to see if any improvement could be made, but without avail. Her broad beam and shallow draught gave her no grip upon the water, and things went from bad to worse, till, finally, just as Fenit appeared to port, the heavy tow rope broke, and the two ends whipped backwards like lashes towards the ships. Luckily, no one was hurt, and with a fresh wire tow rope rigged we proceeded on our way. Soon we were sailing under Brandon Head, which rises, a magnificent mass of scarified rock, to a height of 2,500 feet. On our port quarter lay the Seven Hogs, low little tables of islets, and ahead the outline of the Three Sisters and the Blaskets showed their jagged points clearly against the late evening sky. Volcanic agency has been active all along this coast, and the forms of the mountains are sharp and clear-cut from the upheaval of the strata, which lies almost perpendicular, and has worn by sub-aerial erosion into tower and pinnacle. Occasionally among the tortured strata rises a pure volcanic cone, and the whole view is one of "short, sharp broken hills, like an old lion's cheek teeth."

SKIRTING THE SKELLIGS.

The further down the coast we went the worse weather did the Mermaid make of it. She yawed and rolled and pitched and heaved, and, from what I could see of her passengers, she was not alone in her heaving. Even on board the Margret, a good sea boat, many of the troops were yawning and ill at ease, and the raids upon the rations had significantly ceased; more than one ruddy cheek had paled perceptibly, and the noise of musical instruments was no longer heard.

The second tow rope now broke, and a further delay was caused while it was refitted to the bows of the Mermaid in a different position. This made her tow better, but the strain on her bows began to buckle them, so that, finally, we were forced to cast her off, and allow her to proceed under her own steam, while we reduced speed to avoid getting too far ahead of our slower consort. Through the luminous night we steadily ploughed onward, taking the inner course through the difficult Blasket Sound, past Bray Head and Valencia, and inside the famous Great and Little Skelligs, once the haunt of saints, who have left their churches and bee-hive cells, places to marvel at, and now renowned as the only British breeding place of the gannet. Dawn shone over us as we entered Kenmare River, perhaps the most lovely of Irish fiords. Porpoises played in a school around our prow, hurling themselves clean out of the water and diving through the smother of the bow wave underneath our kiel. Puffins, clown among birds, swam in the water alongside, and overhead the gannets silently swooped and recovered. But we were not on a natural history expedition and our work was now at hand.

THE LANDING.

We knew nothing of the forces of the enemy who were opposed to us, and so Commandant O'Connor, leader of the troops, and himself a native of the district, determined to land and find out. We put him ashore at Coongar harbour, a small bay on the northern shore of Kenmare river, where Rossmere Island, projecting on the east, would conceal the whereabouts of our vessels. Shortly he brought back word that there were about 30 irregulars at Lackeen Coastguard Station, which lies at the mouth of the river Blackwater, three miles to the east of where we were. There seemed no landing place more suitable than Coongar for an attack upon the coastguard station, and accordingly it was determined to land the troops at once. Boats were swung out, and a covering party of thirty men sent out to take and hold the landing place. From the ships no enemy could be discerned, only the kine and sheep housing languidly and the cottagers moving around their half doors (for it was now about half-past eight). But the great god Pan must have paid a visit to Kenmare that evening; for as the first boat drew near the beach a voice, seeming to come from nowhere, cried out to the occupants to come no nearer or else they would be shot.

To troops still somewhat unwell from the effects of the sea, this appeared a most undesirable consummation, so they returned to the ship for reinforcements. With these they landed without a shot being fired or an enemy discovered. They quickly took up positions on the low hills near the shore, and the landing of the remaining troops went on without opposition. Before all the troops had left the Margret a column of smoke could be seen rising over the shoulder of Rossmore Island, and, transferring to the Mermaid, we pushed up to see what was the cause. We were not left long in doubt, for no sooner did we clear the point than we saw the coastguard station ablaze. The irregulars had not waited to fight, but as soon as they heard of our arrival set fire to the station and hastened for the fastnesses of the hills. A few of them were still visible on the skylines, but they were over a mile away, and it was useless to fire. We had to be content with steaming slowly up to Templenoe, which is about four miles from Kenmare, and then back again, trailing our coat as before, and, as before, without provoking any reply.

A FIRE AND A RETREAT.

By the time we arrived back at Coongar all the troops were well on their way to Kenmare, and nothing very much remained for us to do but wait. During the time of our waiting we heard a story which, perhaps, accounts for the rapidity with which the irregulars decamped from the coastguard station. At about 3.30 we set off again slowly in the direction of Kenmare, and found the people of the neighbourhood busy in looting the remains of the coastguard station. A boat was sent off to stop their enjoyment, and was met by the plea that the irregulars, before leaving, had invited everybody to help themselves. This vicarious hospitality did not meet with favour, and the looters were sternly discouraged.

About 5 o'clock we drew near to the pier at Kenmare. To right and left wooded hills came down to the water within revolver shot, and the parapet of the pier would have given ideal protection to the enemy. I was shaving on deck at the time, and saw a number of men on the pier, with another small party marching along it in fours. My spirit went up. At last we were going to have a scrap! But no. Having marched valiantly up the pier, they turned neatly at the end and marched down it again. Before we could drop anchor they had disappeared into the woods, where our half-dozen men could not hope to engage them, and from that time on were no more seen.

AN IMAGINARY BATTLE.

Hardly had they gone than the parish priest came on board to welcome us. The tale he told us of the tale the irregulars told him was strange. According to their story, the irregulars at the coastguard station had been engaging us throughout the morning, and had twice repelled, attacks in full force, leaving the ground littered with our dead and wounded. They at last retreated contesting every inch of the way, with a tale of overwhelming forces. Apparently they so impressed their friends in Kenmare with this tale that the two forces took refuge in a train, whose engine had been kept ready all day, and the irregulars left Kenmare to a man. According to an informant the story of the fall of Kenmare may be summarised in a dozen words:—"One engine with steam up; sixty irregulars with wind up." A quarter of an hour afterwards I went ashore, and, with a couple of others, walked to the town. The population was crazy with delight. They surrounded us cheering, shaking hands, laughing and crying. Hospitality was offered on all hands. We could have got drunk gratis half-a-dozen times over. The advance guard of the troops, who had gone by land, were now just entering the village—many of them local men—and enthusiasm overflowed. Tar barrels appeared from nowhere, and were lighted at the corner of the streets. Throughout the night the town was en fête. As for tales about the irregulars they conformed to the now familiar story, and were summarised over and over in the one phrase: "The Black and Tans were nothing to them."

Next morning we weighed anchor and returned. The weather was by now almost too heavy for the Mermaid to survive as she rolled bridge under. We in the Margret had our share of sea also. We met a boat taking to Kilrush a man who had been wounded in an ambush near Tarbet. On her return we transhipped to her, and so in the early morning arrived in sleepy Limerick. Two shots fired at the Mermaid as she came down the Kenmare River on her return were the only signs of hostility which we encountered on the expedition. The irregular moral would seem to be at a very low ebb in Kerry, for if they had chosen to fight they could have inflicted casualties with small loss to themselves. Evidently, however, their unpopularity with the people of the country is beginning to tell upon them, and they have even less stomach for a square fight than they ever had.

THE RELIEF OF CORK.

HOW THE CITY WAS ENTERED.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)
CORK, Sunday.

A great change has come over Cork City. From a state of suspense and anxiety, the people have passed to one of relief and satisfaction. The surprise landing of national troops of the 2nd Eastern Division at Passage, and the subsequent evacuation of the city by irregulars meant that an ordeal which everyone dreaded had not to be faced. There was no street fighting to speak of, although from the display of force and the preparations made by the irregulars, it was believed that a determined effort would be made to hold the city. The national Army's strategy, however, proved to be more than equal to the occasion, and the cordial reception which the troops received on their entry into Cork on Thursday showed how the people longed for their coming.

The national troops were commanded by Major-General Dalton, Major-General Tobin, and Commandant-General Ennis. At the head of the irregulars was Mr. Erskine Childers, who, it is said, visited the Examiner office on the day before the machines were put out of action. Mr. de Valera was reported to be here on Thursday, but went away in the direction of Blarney.

TROOPSHIP UNDER FIRE.

Some details as to how the landing at Passage was carried out may be of interest. At eleven o'clock on Monday night the steamer, Avronia, arrived off Roche's Point without lights. Having cruised about for a couple of hours, a pilot was picked up at Queenstown, and the steamer went towards the river. At several points she was challenged, and warned that she would be fired on if she went up the channel. For a while the Avronia cruised about without lights, and eventually steered slowly towards Passage, where the irregulars were known to have an outpost. Here several shots were fired at the vessel, but the troops on board did not reply. On approaching what may be described as the makeshift landing stage, a man came forward with a lantern in his hand. He advanced cautiously towards the darkened vessel, with the object, it subsequently transpired, of apologising for having fired on what he believed to be a friendly ship. The captain of the Avronia immediately ran forward, and helped to put out the gangway, while some officers of the ship jumped over the pier and secured the vessel to the quay. Several of the national troops came forward noiselessly, and, observing a man creeping towards them, opened fire. Then followed a shout of "Hands up," and seven prisoners were taken, one of whom was wounded. The granary was captured without further trouble, and posts were rushed forward to the barracks. Irregular fire was opened from the opposite bank, and this peppering of the troopship was kept up during the night and all through the next day.

In their hurried retreat from this position, the irregulars left behind them several motor launches, which were immediately taken over by the troops; also a collection of rifles and revolvers. At ten o'clock on the morning of the landing there were many volunteers at the ship's side, some of whom, hearing of the coup, had travelled from Queenstown in order to join up. In catering for the wants of the troops, the people here did all that they could, and the nuns in the convent joined with the other helpers. Later in the day organised efforts were made to push farther into the country, and at Rochestown the opposition seemed to have been cleared away. Towards evening, however, heavy fighting took place, and eight of the national troops were killed. On Thursday, when the fight was over, the troops got to within speaking distance of Douglas, on the outskirts of the city, and when an attack was opened on the irregulars very few remained to face the music. The wounded on both sides received every attention from the Red Cross staff attached to the national Army, the saloon of the Avronia being used as a temporary hospital. In this department valuable assistance was rendered by a well-known Press photographer, who appeared at the psychological moment and left aside his camera for the work of dressing wounds. There were fourteen cases to be dealt with altogether, some so serious that they had to be sent for further treatment to the local hospitals. In some instances the injuries were clearly due to the use of dum-dum and explosive bullets. Some of the wounded irregulars—and they were in the majority—were found to have such ammunition in their possession; but it made no difference in the treatment that they received, and they were profuse in expressions of gratitude to their captors.

THE CITY ENTERED.

Meantime, Commandant-General Ennis, in an armoured car named "The Manager," was moving towards Cork with a force of about 50 men, and at 8.30 on Thursday night he entered the city via Douglas, having first sent a couple of shrapnel shells over the woods in order to disperse some irregulars in the neighbourhood. From that point, along the South Mall, at Parnell Bridge, and at the Southern road, the advance party had a triumphal march. Every window had its occupant waving a cordial welcome. Men cheered loudly in the streets, and when crossing Parnell Bridge the troops had to march in single file before taking up temporary headquarters at the Corn market. Later they moved into the Bandon and South Coast Railway Station, where they remained for the night. During their progress through the city the troops received many a hearty hand-shake, and women embraced some of them in their joy.

An attempt had been made to blow up Parnell Bridge, but it was unsuccessful, although the explosion was heard for miles around. In the South Mall some shots were exchanged between a small band of irregulars and the Legion of ex-Servicemen. There was also firing in some of the principal streets, especially on the southern side; but the actual fight for Cork City only lasted between 30 and 40 minutes, and so ended the long-expected battle for the capital of Munster. At noon on Thursday there were reported to be about 4,000 irregulars in the city, and everything pointed to a stand being made. The burning of Cork military barracks, however, was started on Tuesday evening, and, following the tactics adopted in other towns, this act suggested an early evacuation. That the work of destruction might be completed more readily, barrels of oil had been distributed all over the barracks, and the entire block of buildings was almost completely destroyed. The east wing did not fare so badly as the rest of the buildings, but the only parts that have even partially escaped are the Protestant church, the gymnasium, the mortuary, and some sheds.

HAMPERING THE BRIGADE.

Owing to the water supply having been tampered with, the Fire Brigade were unable to do their duty, even if all their appliances had been available, but these had been removed from Sullivan's quay Station on Wednesday by a number of armed men. The burning started with the hutments, which, with all the barrack furniture and equipment, had been advertised for sale by auction some days previously, and the fire was to burn itself out. The brigade, however, did all that was humanly possible to keep it under control. Other buildings that were fired on Thursday included Union quay Police Barracks, which had been used as irregular headquarters; the Bridewell, Cornmarket street; Red Abbey Barracks, Shandon street; Tuckey street Barracks, Empress place, Summerhill, and the barracks at Elizabeth Fort. Dense clouds of smoke rose skywards as these buildings were being consumed, and the noise of frequent explosions gave the impression that there was heavy fighting, and caused alarm.

It was soon evident that the men and boys who had been pressed into the irregular service against their will were endeavouring to get clear of their unpleasant occupation. Disheartened and disillusioned, many of them threw away their arms and ammunition, and a collection of rifles and revolvers was found in the stream beside the Mardyke Walk. A number of motor cars, which were kept by the irregulars at Union quay Barracks, were thrown into the river, as it was not possible to take them away. The story goes that there was £500 in the wallet of one of them. At Blackpool on Thursday the Post Office was raided and £250 taken by armed men; while a number of shops, large and small, were visited for the purpose of commandeering goods. On Thursday the channel, which had been blocked by irregulars earlier in the week, was cleared, and it was possible for even large vessels at high tide to pass up to the quayside. Meantime, to prevent the news of their defeat being spread abroad, the irregulars organised an armed sledgehammer brigade, and wrecked the plant and machinery of the two Cork newspapers. This was on Tuesday, so that no news was circulated on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, but on Saturday the Examiner appeared, smaller than usual, it is true, but containing a full account of the past week's events.

THE PROCLAMATION.

On Friday night the following Proclamation, dated August 11, was issued:—

"The national troops have entered the City of Cork in order to restore and preserve the liberties and rights of the citizens. They have no desire to interfere unnecessarily with the normal civilian activities of the community. It is for the citizens of Cork to organise and administer their own civic affairs. The national forces, so far as is consistent with their military duties, will assist and co-operate with the civilian representatives.

"All arms, munitions, equipment, and uniforms in possession of civilians must be immediately delivered up to the military authorities. Also all stolen property, by whomsoever held, including unlawfully commandeered motor cars and illegally seized money, must be forthwith handed to the police or military authorities.

"Civilians are expected in their own interest to co-operate with the military by giving information concerning sniping positions, ambushes, road mines, and plans for destroying property.

(Signed)
"J. E. DALTON, Major-General,
"General Officer Commanding."

The information asked for in this proclamation is readily forthcoming, and the position of the irregulars is quickly becoming an impossible one. Several road mines were found and disconnected before the irregulars had a chance of using them, while dumps of arms and ammunition are also being located. About 40 prisoners were captured in Cork and eleven at Passage, where, by the way, two irregulars were killed in the hills. The number of prospective recruits for the national Army is enormous—much more than the staff is able to deal with.

Two railway bridges were destroyed between Cork and Mallow, and some between Cork and Youghal. Many of the irregulars retreated towards the west, while others vanished in other directions, to reappear, perhaps, in guerilla tactics later. Business is now returning to the normal in Cork, but many people are idle owing to the complete stoppage of the railway service. A meeting was held on Sunday for the purpose of devising ways and means of dealing with the distress which is now so prevalent in the city. Temporary measures for the relief of acute distress have meanwhile been made by the Cork Unemployment Central Committee.

About 40 irregular prisoners captured in Cork were detained in one of the boats, and were afterwards conveyed to an unknown destination. During the interval between the departure of the irregulars and the arrival of the troops, there was a good deal of looting by civilians, but the protection of private property is a matter that will doubtless receive immediate consideration from the authorities. I understand that when the irregulars left Cork they took with them a number of national prisoners, whom they released at Blarney.

BALLINCOLLIG AND FERMOY BARRACKS.

CORK, Sunday Night.

I learn on good authority that Ballincollig Barracks has been burnt, and that fighting has taken place in the direction of Macroom. The fact that the barracks at Fermoy have likewise been destroyed points to that town also having been evacuated by the irregulars. Indeed, it is possible that national troops may already have entered the town.

Before the irregulars left Cork, two hundred prisoners, who had been taken in various places and were confined in Victoria Barracks, had their boots and other property taken from them. They were then marched to Blarney, liberated, re-arrested, and liberated again.

RAIDS ON THE POST OFFICE.

In one case there was only eight pence in the office. The driver of the mail between Aughnacliffe and Granard was stopped on Saturday evening by an armed man. After stealing two registered packets, and warning the driver not to leave for half-an-hour, the raider went away. A post office linesman was stopped by two armed men on the road leading to Drumkeeran from Drumshambo (County Leitrim) and was robbed of his money, bicycle, tools, and the apparatus for repair work.

YOUGHAL ENTERED.

TROOPS' EASY VICTORY.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)
YOUGHAL, Friday.

Although many people in Youghal were caught out for the Bank holiday week-end when national troops of the 3rd Battalion Dublin Brigade landed here on Tuesday, the inconvenience was regarded lightly in view of the fact that it meant the removal of a menace to the community. Here, as in other parts, the irregulars had made themselves thoroughly unpopular, and their disappearance has not been the cause of any regrets. The landing was made under heavy fire, but the troops advanced rapidly, and soon captured the police barrack, the railway station, and the workhouse. The military barrack was captured without a stone being injured. With it were captured munitions and stores to the value of £1,500, besides motor cars and a naval Maxim gun. The fact that these stores, which included land mines, were left untouched, shows how unprepared the irregulars were for flight. Two of the national troops were slightly wounded; four of the irregulars were killed and about five were wounded. Some prisoners were captured. Since then the place has been very quiet. Every road within a five-mile radius is strongly guarded, and one requires a permit to leave and re-enter the town. These passports, by the way, are closely scrutinised by vigilant guards, mostly ex-Service men, who take nothing for granted.

From Youghal to within a few miles of Dungarvan is entirely under Free State control. Passing through Dungarvan towards Waterford, at a blown up bridge called The Pike, I came into contact with irregulars, who halted our car and asked for the driver's permit. On assuring the guard that his passengers were simply travellers, the driver was permitted to go his way.

It was much easier to pass the irregulars than to negotiate the destroyed bridge. Going into a by-road, we steered into a pasture along by the headland, into a cornfield, and up to the door of a small farmhouse. Here a young woman came towards the car and asked—"What about that 5s.?" We then ascertained that where cars ford the river a notice-board is standing with the words—"Motors 5s., or no admission." As at least seven cars had passed us in the opposite direction, it is evident that the longer that bridge remains unrepaired the better for this enterprising small farmer's pocket.

The main road to Cork from Youghal, except at a point about eight miles from the city, where some bridges had been injured, is perfect. This was the only way by which travellers from Dublin to Waterford could get to the Southern city, and everyone could not afford it. Owing to the demand for cars, garage-owners were inclined to be stiff in their demands and those with urgent business had to make the best of it. Owing to the blocking of the railway between Youghal and Cork, the plight of some women and children who were stranded for the holidays was deplorable, and everything possible was done with the help of the national troops to get them back to their homes.

DEATH OF LORD NORTHCLIFFE.

Harmsworth has come to be associated; for Lord Northcliffe had at his disposal, and proved himself fully alive to, rapid methods for obtaining news which were largely new to the newspaper world, in which he played so prominent a part: thus he had an improving and ever-widening telegraphic system, the discoveries of Signor Marconi and the aerial mail service, all of which are at the disposal of the modern newspaper, which can promptly tap sources of information in any part of the known world that happens at the moment to become a "live" news centre.

Lord Northcliffe kept himself abreast of the latest scientific methods of obtaining fresh news, and he also did much through his newspapers to encourage some of the great inventors of recent years in their early struggles.

RESPONDING TO THE CHANGE.

The Harmsworth Press naturally came in for its measure of hostile criticism, but the financial success of Lord Northcliffe's enterprises, and their large circulation, tended to make his personal influence a considerable factor in public affairs. One after another, several of the older London newspapers adapted themselves, both as regards price and style, to the Daily Mail method of appealing to the public. The crowning sensation was reached in Fleet street when it transpired that the controlling voice in the office of The Times had been secured by Lord Northcliffe, and that the leading daily paper in the Three Kingdoms, with its great traditions and influence, had passed into Harmsworth hands. So far as London journalism was concerned, Lord Northcliffe had achieved his greatest triumph, and the boy from Chapelizod had become, in the phrase of his admirers, "the Napoleon of the Press." Many public honours and titles were bestowed upon him; he became successively a baronet in 1904, a baron in the following year, and a viscount in 1917.

In the political world Lord Northcliffe did not actively associate himself with the fortunes of either of the great British parties. His newspapers, in which his personality was ever dominant, played a considerable part in moulding popular opinion, and Lord Northcliffe, particularly in recent years, was a frequent contributor of signed articles on the topics of the hour, while on not a few occasions he figured as a public speaker. We are told by his biographer that, "with the possible exception of Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, no newspaper editor has written so freely in his own journals."

THE GREAT WAR.

Upon the outbreak of the European war in 1914 he threw himself vigorously into the campaign for stimulating the supplies of men and munitions for the British fighting forces, and when conscription became essential he did much to facilitate its adoption in Parliament. His propaganda work in enemy countries had a marked beneficial effect upon the cause of the Allies, and he also did much to bring about the active participation in the war of the United States.

Motoring and aviation found in their early days an enthusiastic advocate in Lord Northcliffe, who made his newspapers the medium for popularising them. Thus the first long-distance motor trials in Britain found in Lord Northcliffe an active friend, and when aviation was in its infancy he was not discouraged by early failures and disappointments, and showed an undoubted gift of vision by his whole-hearted methods of encouragement. Thus the first prize of £1,000 offered for flying in England was put up by Lord Northcliffe, and it is of interest to recall that the prize was won by a fellow-countryman of the distinguished newspaper proprietor in the person of Lieutenant-Colonel Moore Brabazon, a member of a County Meath family.

Then Lord Northcliffe offered a prize of £10,000 for the first flying man to achieve a flight around the United Kingdom. At that early day the feat was regarded by the majority of people as a practical impossibility. Nevertheless, the offer was promptly taken up, and Dublin people will recall the plucky attempt of a British Army airman named Hawker to win the prize. As a result of engine trouble Hawker fell into the sea near Skerries, and narrowly escaped drowning. The rapid development of aviation, no less than that of motoring, amply justified Lord Northcliffe's early confidence, and upon the outbreak of the war he was one of the first to recognise the importance of the part that would be played in the hostilities by the Air Forces.

When war was declared in 1914, as already indicated, Lord Northcliffe threw all his energies and all the influence of his newspapers into the struggle against German domination. He visited the battle fronts, and in 1916 published a book entitled "At the War." In the following year he was appointed Chairman of the British War Mission to the United States, and was appointed in 1917 a member of the Civil Aerial Transport Committee. In 1918 he was appointed Director of Propaganda in Enemy Countries. The Associated Newspapers, which Lord Northcliffe controlled, were very keen in their advocacy of the speeding up of the manufacture of war munitions at a period when the keeping up of supplies was of vital importance to the Allies.

A WORLD TOUR.

Last year Lord Northcliffe made a tour round the world, sending signed articles to his newspapers from the various countries visited, being accompanied on his tour by the Editor of The Times and a large retinue of journalists. His mission was supposed to be partly of a business and partly of a political character. During his visit to the United States an incident occurred which received the widest publicity, arising out of an interview between Lord Northcliffe and the King, of which a version attributed to Lord Northcliffe was officially repudiated.

IRISH SITUATION.

The recent tragic developments of the Irish situation found in Lord Northcliffe, both personally and through his newspapers, an advocate of peace, and he did much to foster in England an atmosphere favourable to a peaceful solution of the long and embittered struggle. Lord Northcliffe's warm devotion to the land of his birth is recalled as one of his outstanding characteristics, and although England, with its teeming population, was naturally the scene of what he used to term his "big adventure," he ever retained a warm affection for Ireland, and desired to see her peaceful and contented. His last public appearance in Ireland was at a dinner given in 1913 to Mr. R. J. Mecredy, the well-known motorist and cyclist, of the publishing firm of Mecredy, Percy and Co., Ltd. On that occasion Lord Northcliffe delivered a speech in which there were many affectionate references to the land of his birth

FRENCH PRESS TRIBUTE.

"A STAUNCH FRIEND."

PARIS, Monday.

All this afternoon's newspapers pay a tribute to Lord Northcliffe as a great journalist, a great Englishman, and a staunch friend of France.

The Liberte says:—Because Lord Northcliffe was a patriot he realised that the Francophile policy of King Edward VII. was the only British policy to combat the Germanic monster.

Other articles dwell on Lord Northcliffe's immense war services to the Allied cause, notably his propaganda in enemy countries, and record the encouragement that he gave throughout his life to inventors, explorers, and others towards the advancement of knowledge and the progress of civilisation.

The Temps says that regret at the loss of Lord Northcliffe will be no less deeply felt in France than in England.

Towards France, the Journal says, he entertained a sincere affection.—(Reuter.)

AN EMPIRE CHAMPION.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

The newspapers here refer in special articles to Lord Northcliffe's remarkable personality. Mr. Hughes, the Federal Prime Minister, in a statement, said:—Lord Northcliffe was a strenuous fighter for the Empire, and all who love the Empire will deeply mourn his loss.—(Reuter.)

Mr. Andrew Meikle, editor of the Express and Star, Wolverhampton, died yesterday, aged 75. He had been associated with the paper for thirty-seven years. He was a native of Dunfermline. At one period he edited the Somerset County Herald, and had been editor and manager of the Warrington Examiner.

PEACE IN QUEENSTOWN.

THE DESTROYED BUILDINGS.

Our Queenstown Correspondent states that all the country between the coast of Cork and the City of Cork is now clear of the irregulars, and yesterday communication was reopened to Cork by river. The railway line from Cork to Queenstown has been blown up at two points, while Belvelly Bridge, on the main road to Cork from Queenstown, has also been destroyed. The landing stages at Aghada, Ring, Crosshaven, and other villages that abut on the harbour have suffered a like fate; while the palatial building known as Admiralty House and the military hospital have been burned to the ground. The burning of the latter building has caused the greatest indignation, for the townspeople anticipated that this up-to-date hospital would become the property of the town, where a modern and well-equipped institution of the kind is one of its greatest needs. The hutments were also destroyed by fire, and anything that escaped the flames was subsequently looted.

Aghada Hall and other residences suffered similarly, and the feeling of 99 per cent. of the people for the irregulars is one of indescribable contempt.

About a dozen irregulars, who had been patrolling the town up to Friday at noon, when they suddenly disappeared, returned late on Friday evening, without arms, and some in a mud-bespattered condition, and it was freely stated that they were amongst the large body who at Watergrass Hill had surrendered to the troops. A few of them late in the evening stopped a number of British soldiers who were in Queenstown from Carlisle, and searched them.

It is reported that the residence of Mr. Stewart French at Currigawoe was raided on Friday night.

It is expected that the King of Spain will be the guest of Their Majesties at Balmoral towards the end of the month, when he will have some shooting over the Royal moors.

BIG CAPTURES IN MAYO.

37 PRISONERS AND ARMS.

Troops, under the command of General Lawlor, left Ballina yesterday morning at 2 o'clock, and arrived back in the evening with a batch of 37 prisoners. The troops were for hours engaged in searching the district between Swinford and Kiltimagh, and early in the morning came on a large party of irregulars at Ballinamore, near Kiltimagh. General Lawlor, who was in front of the troops with Commandant Coyle, in a motor car, observed an obstruction on the road, and, suspecting an ambush, they dismounted.

The ambushers immediately opened fire, and for fifteen minutes General Lawlor and Commandant Coyle engaged the attackers. During this skirmish Commandant Coyle was wounded in the cheek and arm, and General Lawlor had some narrow escapes. Their motor car was disabled. Although Commandant Coyle was badly wounded he made his way back to the main body of troops who were raiding houses some miles away.

General Lawlor speaks in terms of the highest praise of the gallantry of Commandant Coyle. He was wounded in the neck, and believed that he was fatally injured. "I have not long to live," said Commandant Coyle, "and I will go back and tell the boys." He succeeded in reaching the main body, who immediately dashed to the scene of the ambush. With their arrival the resistance of the irregulars gave way, and in a short time the firing died down.

The troops captured 37 prisoners, 37 rifles, 14 revolvers, 32 bombs, and a large quantity of ammunition. It is not known if the irregulars suffered any casualties. The capture also included a machine for making ammunition and bombs.

The wounds sustained by Commandant Coyle are not so serious as they were at first believed to be. He is progressing favourably.

Important documents, charts, and maps were amongst the booty, as were also large quantities of gelignite, glycerine, and mines. Amongst the prisoners are D. Sheehy, P. Deignan, — MacNicholas, and James Henry. It is considered that the capture of these leaders will break the backbone of the resistance of the irregulars in East Mayo. This section of the irregulars had been giving much annoyance, and farmers were compelled to provide sleeping accommodation for them.

When the troops were returning to Ballina Captain Dwyer was thrown off the armoured car and sustained a fracture of the skull. He has not yet recovered consciousness.

IRISH ART AT BALLSBRIDGE.

THE PRIZE-WINNERS.

Visitors to the Dublin Horse Show this year must not miss the opportunity of seeing the Irish Art Exhibition, in the Industries' Hall. Here there is placed on view a magnificent assortment of Irish manufactured articles.

Walking through the hall, one sees all around articles of rare beauty and high artistic value, and one cannot but be gratified by the thought that all these beautiful things are the product of Irish brains and Irish labour

The walls are decorated with paintings, most of which are for sale. In the centre of the room stands a square structure, into the walls of which are fitted numerous stained glass windows. They are of lovely design, and speak eloquently of the rapid strides Ireland has made in this particular industry.

Through the permission of the Postmaster-General, visitors will also be given an opportunity of seeing the originals of various designs for stamps which have been submitted to him. The designs, which were eventually accepted are also there.

The contents of the numerous show-cases throughout the hall cater for all tastes. One is resplendent with beautifully-coloured tapestry. Another contains many richly-designed purses and "vanity bags," while another contains many wonderful pieces of art in enamels and enamelled metal.

Ladies will be especially interested in the crochet work, Limerick lace, lingerie, and embroidery.

There is a fine display of gold and silversmith's work, jewellery and hammered ironwork.

THE EXHIBITS.

CLERY AND CO., LTD. (STAND NO. 20).

Messrs. Clery and Co., Ltd., who have just opened their palatial new premises in Lower Sackville street—the finest and most complete emporium in Ireland—are showing, at Stand No. 20, in the Main Hall, what is unquestionably a most attractive epitome of all the chief departments of the great and enterprising firm. At Clery's stand the sportsman and the resident in the country are particularly catered for. Here will be found a choice selection of raincoats and motor coats such as suit all kinds of the variable weather which constitutes Ireland's principal charm. There is also an excellent selection of footwear for shooting, riding, and coursing, all the exhibits being of the highest grade and most durable quality. In other classes of sport the tennis and golf players will find that they have not been overlooked, and, indeed, that all their requirements are being amply catered for. A choice selection of gloves is being shown for both ladies and gentlemen, and, in fact, both sexes and all ages will find something to attract them at Clery's stand. In addition to the sporting requisites there is also a very pleasing variety of fancy goods, in which quality and cheapness are two of the outstanding features.

DIXON AND HEMPENSTALL (STAND NO. 32).

Messrs. Dixon and Hempenstall, 12 Suffolk street, the well-known manufacturing opticians, have a number of most interesting exhibits at their stand (No. 32). There are here displayed a variety of high-class optical, scientific, and mathematical instruments noted for their extreme accuracy and precision. The latest improvements in prism binoculars are being exhibited at this stand, illustrating the three essential features of a really good pair of glasses—extra large field of view, great illumination, and clear definition, the magnifying powers being six and eight times. A choice assortment of the latest types in cameras is also on view, as well as films and all photographic requisites. The firm's reputation for spectacles is well known—the Axpel lenses being among their latest productions—and it may be mentioned that the sight-testing rooms at Suffolk street are open daily.

FINE CHEMICALS, LTD. (25).

At this stand there are exhibits of the popular Dromona complexion soaps and creams. These goods are the manufacture of the above-named firm, whose establishment is at 40 Mary street, Dublin. Samples of a great variety of good goods of a cognate character are here to be seen, such as a choice variety of toilets, lavender waters, sponges, etc.; also Lysol Germokil disinfectants (all of Irish manufacture), and veterinary medicines of all descriptions—in fact, a regular "Dumb Friends' League" emporium to supply all requirements. Fine Chemicals, Ltd., is a firm that has an old and ever-increasing clientele.

BROWNE AND NOLAN, LTD., NASSAU STREET (STAND NO. 31).

The well-known firm of Browne and Nolan, Ltd., 41-42 Nassau street, have on exhibit at Stand No. 31 a choice assortment of office and commercial requisites, including all the latest improvements. This firm has ever been noted for the encouragement of Irish manufacture, and every article which comes within the scope of their activity is, where possible, of home manufacture. This preference does not, however, prevent their keeping a keen eye on the world's latest improvements in office furniture and requisites, and several novel exhibits at their stand show that they are well abreast of the times. A feature is made of loose-leaved ledgers and horse and cattle account books and other branches of printing concerned with the horse-breeding and farming industry. The general exhibits range from attaché cases and all classes of choice leather goods to fountain pens and watches, as well as books and stationery of every description, while there are also shown the latest styles in Irish-manufactured menu cards, suitable for hotels, restaurants, and clubs, and interesting reproductions of coloured printing such as is illustrated in the cover of the show catalogue.

JOHN BARRINGTON AND SONS.

The products of the factory of Messrs. John Barrington and Sons, King's Inns street, Dublin, are well known all over Ireland for their excellent quality. A fine range of samples of the different varieties of their soaps is to be seen at their stand in the Central Hall, and is well worthy of inspection by housekeepers and manageresses of large establishments and public institutions. The "Pelican," "Pure Weather," and the "Warder" carbolic soap, as well as the XX tallow brown, have long since gained the favour of householders. There are toilet soaps of different descriptions, and the complexion toilet soap is a great favourite. The Velka series includes toilet, nursery, and medicated shaving soaps, while the "Autocrat" shaving stick is popular with gentlemen. The dry soap named "Quixo" finds itself in large demand for cleaning purposes.

MR. L. J. WATKIN (STAND No. 1).

This stand, representative of the establishment of Mr. L. J. Watkin, 77 and 78 Dame street, Dublin, will be a source of attraction to all hunting people. There are exhibits of hunting boots, leggings in calf-skin, pig-skin, buck-skin, cloth, and canvas. He specialises in everything which the sportsman and the hunting man require in the way of equipment, from shirts to spurs and riding crops, and from bright-coloured waistcoats to ladies' and gentlemen's umbrella seats. Here a hunting gentleman can be fitted out with all that is necessary to make him comfortable on horseback.

EASON AND SON, LTD. (STAND NO. 51).

The well-known firm of Eason and Son (Ltd.), 40-41 Lower Sackville street (Stand No. 51), have not only successfully weathered recent troubled times, so far as interrupted railway and postal communications were concerned, but these troubles have proved a test of their efficiency, from which they have emerged with enhanced reputation. In their palatial new premises in Lower Sackville street the numerous activities of this great firm of wholesale newspaper and booksellers are now at least as complete in their efficiency as at any time in the long period of success with which the name of Eason is associated throughout Ireland. Evidences of this success are pleasingly displayed at Stand No. 51, where the needs of the Show visitors are catered for in a manner that leaves nothing to be desired. In addition to books, magazines, and newspapers there is a choice selection of printing, stationery, and fancy goods, and visitors will find their requirements attended to with promptness and efficiency.

WILSON HARTNELL AND CO. (22).

Messrs. Wilson Hartnell and Co., Commercial Buildings, Dame street, Dublin, are selling at their stand that interesting publication, "The Irish Horse Show Annual," and "Old Ireland in Pictures." Both of these are admirably got up, and will be found worth preserving in any Irish home. "The Horse Show Annual" needs no introduction, and this number is quite up to the best of its predecessors. The other book, the price of which is only eighteen pence, contains beautifully finished coloured photographs of the Four Courts as they were before the burning and as they are now; of the Custom House as it was and as it appeared when it was being devoured by the flames. There are numerous fine pictures of Dublin and of the destruction of Sackville street in the early days of last month. It is an admirable summary of the two Dublin "Risings" (1916-22) and their consequences. It also contains photographs of notable historical personages and a copy of the writ and indenture of return of members to the Irish Parliament. There are also photogravures of Sir John Lavery's famous pictures of Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins, each copy being signed by them and by the artist. Of the 175 copies that were originally printed, only 45 now remain for sale.

"THE IRISH TIMES."

Following the practice of many years past, the Irish Times has a cosy Stall in the Central Hall, on the right hand side, quite close to the main entrance. Here the Irish Times, the Weekly Irish Times, and the Irish Field will be on sale. Advertisements will be received at this Stall for any of these publications.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.

J. W. Whitbread's well-known melodrama, "A Race for Life," was capably presented at the Queen's Theatre last night. The play deals with the fortunes of a young man, Frank Seymour, who is falsely accused of murder, and who, after many trials, succeeds in vindicating his honour. Thomas Moran, who undertook the leading part, gave a very pleasant performance. Miss Lily Bathy, as Isabel Armstrong, added to the part a sense of refinement and dignity. Mr. P. O'Flanagan scored in the part of Sir Richard Armstrong, his acting being consistently good. The comedy element was ably sustained by Miss Molly Douglas, as Polly Finch, a young lady with two lovers, who evidently believed in leading her lovers a pretty dance. Vittals Guespin, the French servant, was amusingly portrayed by Leo Strong, and the antics of Silas Sloggum, a poacher, were greeted with constant laughter. J. P. Brennan gave a strong presentation of the part of the rascally Warder Lockhart. Others who appeared with success are:—Miss May Fitzpatrick (Rose Warburton), Valentine Vousden (Robert Seymour), Chas. E. Keogh (Jack Armstrong), and Miss Gertie Lena (Margaret).

SALE OF PAINTINGS.

ENGINE CRASHES INTO HOUSE.

OCCUPANTS' NARROW ESCAPE.

At a quarter to ten o'clock yesterday morning a runaway Midland and Great Northern locomotive, at Peterboro' crashed into a stationery brakevan standing at the buffers.

The van was driven from the metals right through a house adjoining the permanent way occupied by a railway controller named Ernest Cole. The engine, which was travelling "light," drove its tender and brakevan right into the house, where it came to a standstill in the kitchen which collapsed, and Mrs. Cole, who was in bed in a room above the kitchen, fell through the floor into the débris.

She is suffering from shock, cuts and bruises.

Cole's daughter, aged 10, was extricated unhurt from the débris, but his mother-in-law, aged 75, was pinned in the pantry, and when rescued was suffering from severe shock. Cole had just left the bedroom when the crash occurred.

The engine driver and fireman jumped from the engine when in motion, and were unhurt.

YOUTH'S SUICIDE.

EXCITED BY CINEMA.

Remarkable evidence was given at an inquest at Fakenham, Norfolk, yesterday on Noel Vunley, aged 11, who was found dead on Friday with a gunshot wound in the chest.

A companion stated that after seeing a picture of Tarzan of the Apes at a cinema Vunley imitated the feats depicted, including undressing, climbing up trees, and remaining there all day.

On occasions he had played with knives and wooden swords, dressed as an Indian, and tried to hang from trees.

On Friday, armed with a gun, he ran about on the tiles of his father's house, shot into the air, and then threatened to shoot children in the yard.

Returning to the bedroom through the window, he tied the gun by the trigger to the bedrail, then apparently held the muzzle to his chest, and fell back on the bed causing the gun to fire.

No notice was taken of subsequent movements, as his companions thought he was playing as before. He left an unfinished note, saying he shot himself.

The jury returned a verdict of suicide while in a state of great excitement, temporarily insane.

CAPTAIN NELSON.

HOME OFFICE STATEMENT.

The Home Office issued the following statement last night:—The following information has been obtained relating to the case of Captain Nelson:—Captain Nelson was seen by the police at Ashburton to leave that town in a taxi cab on Wednesday night about 10.40, and the landlord's son at Captain Nelson's lodgings at Buckland in the Moors, states that he arrived there at 11 o'clock and spent half an hour over his supper, talking to the son before going to bed. Nothing unusual was noticed in his appearance, and he made no mention of having just been attacked. Captain Nelson had lunch with the landord's family next day, and nothing was heard of his wounds until 3.30 p.m., when a friend with whom he had communicated arrived at his lodgings. The statement adds that a safety razor blade, stained with blood, has been found by Captain Nelson's landlord in the lodgings at Buckland. No evidence could be obtained of the presence of any suspicious strangers in the Ashburton and Buckland neighbourhood.

The anonymous letter which Captain Nelson is reported to have forwarded to Scotland Yard has, the Home Office states, not reached the Metropoiltan police, but inquiries are being made with a view to tracing it.

BIG FIRE IN DUBLIN.

£50,000 DAMAGE.

An outbreak of fire occurred yesterday morning in the Irish Curling Hair Manufacturing Company's extensive premises in Brown street, with the result that, despite the unflagging efforts of the Fire Brigade, the factory was completely gutted.

How the fire originated is not known, but it is believed to have been caused in the teasing room by matches concealed in the material which was being used, or by a spark from the machinery.

When the Brigade arrived the whole of the building was in the grip of the fire. Unfortunately, there was an insufficient supply of water, and the Brigade engine was used to supplement it by drawing a quantity from the Poddle river.

When it was found that the building could not possibly be saved the work of the Brigade was directed to preventing the fire spreading to other buildings, including the Weaver square Convent Schools, and in this they succeeded.

The employés of the company, about two hundred in number, were working in the higher storeys of the building when the fire was discovered, and some difficulty was experienced in getting them out of the premises. They were, however, safely lowered to the ground floor by a hoist. The damage is estimated at £50,000.

RAIDS ON RAILWAYS.

THREE ENGINES DAMAGED.

On inquiry at Kingsbridge yesterday it was ascertained that three of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company's engines had been maliciously damaged at Clonmel Station and rendered useless pending repairs. The signal cabin at the same point was burned out by members of the irregular forces.

A railway bridge crossing the Blackwater near Cappoquin Station has been partly blown up. Armed raiders seized a quantity of egg cases at Kiltimagh Station.

On the other hand, a satisfactory feature is the great extension of train services on this company's system, which will be noticed from our advertising column.

Telegraphic communication from Kingsbridge only extends as far as Maryborough to-day.

BANK MANAGERS ROBBED.

£2,000 SEIZED.

The managers of the National and the Munster and Leinster Banks, from Ballinamore, County Leitrim when going to their branches at Swanlinbar, Co. Cavan, were stopped by about eight armed men near Dernacrieve Cross, two miles from Swanlinbar. The money, which they had for the fair, was taken.

The manager of the Ulster Bank in Ballyconnell passed the spot about five minutes previously, but did not see the raiders, who were on a by-road.

Troops from all the surrounding towns are searching for them. The Ulster Bank manager was escorted home by armed troops.

It is estimated that about £2,000 was taken.

ATTACK ON A BARRACK.

Details to hand, our Longford Correspondent telegraphs, confirm the report of an attack on Drumlish Barrack by irregulars early on Monday morning. As in the case of Edgeworthstown, the enemy was forced to retire. The inhabitants of the village were awakened by a bomb explosion in the direction of the local barrack. The attacking party are believed to have numbered about fifty, while only four soldiers of the national forces were in occupation of the barrack. Rifle and orevolver shots followed, and an attempt was made to set the building on fire. On the approach of a motor car, the attackers fled, leaving a quantity of petrol behind. The courageous defenders are still in possession of the barrack.

JOTTINGS AT LEOPARDSTOWN.

FASHIONABLE ASSEMBLY.

(BY OUR LADY CORRESPONDENT.)

For the second day of the Leopardstown meeting yesterday the weather was all that could be desired, and a very large crowd enjoyed a pleasant afternoon.

The wind was a trifle cold, with the result that heavier costumes, and in many cases furs, were worn by the ladies present; but the general appearance of the lawn was much gayer than on Saturday.

The popularity of navy blue, various shades of brown, and black, relieved with white, was very marked; also the decided predilection for coloured footwear. Some vivid hued hats introduced an effective touch of colour, and, though no startling examples of the new fashions were observed, the general standard of the dress was very smart.

The Viceregal Stand, with closely-drawn blinds, had a somewhat desolate look, but the crowds on the Members' and Stewards' Stands made amends, while the attendance in the Grand Stand enclosure was very large.

Amongst those present were the Earl of Kenmare, the Earl of Enniskillen, Viscount and Viscountess Powerscourt, the Hon. Doreen Wingfield, Sir Horace Plunkett and party, Sir Timothy O'Brien and the Misses O'Brien, Mrs. Puckle and party, from the Royal Hospital; Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Fitzpatrick, General and Mrs. Smith-Bingham, Colonel and Mrs. Clarke, Sir William Goulding, General Sir Bryan Mahon, Colonel Challoner Knox, Captain and Mrs. R. Wyndham-Quin, Colonel and Mrs. Croft, Colonel Edgeworth Johnstone, Mr. and Mrs. T. K. Laidlaw and party, Sir Michael and Lady O'Loghlen, Miss Monckton, Major and Mrs. O'Malley Keyes, Lady Myles, Captain Boyd Rochfort, V.C., and Mrs. Boyd Rochfort; Mrs. Shawe-Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fottrell, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Brinckman, Colonel and Mrs. Cecil Pery, Colonel Lenox Conyngham, Lady and Miss Lynch, Colonel and Mrs. Sparke, Captain and Mrs. King French, the Misses French, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Barker, Dr. and Mrs. O'Reilly, Mr. T. Lewin, Mr. and Mrs. George Mitchell, Mr. Pack-Beresford, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lloyd, Miss Clarke, Mr. E. Bellaney, Mr. J. H. H. WIRELESS EXHIBITION.

Messrs. Bertram Day and Co., Ltd., advertising contractors, of Charing Cross, are organising an All-British Wireless Exhibition and Convention, to be held under the auspices of the Wireless Society of London and affiliated societies, at the Horticultural Hall, Westminster, London, from the 30th September till the 7th October next. From a public point of view, the exhibition will offer a unique opportunity of obtaining a practical insight into the possibilities of wireless as a means of instruction and recreation, and should be especially interesting in view of the importance of broad-casting. One of the principal objects of the exhibition will be to demonstrate the method of "listening in" at home to broad-casted news, entertainments, and concerts.

A SOLDIER SHOT.

When Corporal Kane, of the national Army, was cycling on Saturday night from Clonaslee, where he had been visiting his family, to Portarlington, a party of irregulars, a short distance from Clonaslee, ordered him to halt. Kane, who was unarmed, dismounted, and the irregulars fired, shattering his leg with an explosive bullet. Nicholas Maher, a civilian, was also wounded. The irregulars dressed Maher's wound, but left Corporal Kane lying in a field, where a priest and doctor subsequently attended him. The doctor brought him to Mountmellick, whence he was conveyed to Leix County Infirmary.

The Government of New South Wales has agreed in principle to an immigration scheme under which the Commonwealth, New South Wales, and Great Britain will all pay one-third of the cost of bringing out land settlers.

The New South Wales Government has decided to adopt the recommendations of the Railway Commission in respect of the unification of the main railway lines.

U.S. MARKETS.

STOCKS CLOSED HEAVY.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

NEW YORK, Monday.

Stocks opened irregular. The movements throughout the session were confused, Railroads and other representative shares being sold under less favourable foreign and domestic news, and minor Industrials and specialities going higher on favourable trade news and pool operations. The final course of the market was downward under increased pressure against Railroads, Equipments, Oils, and Steels. The closing was heavy.

LEOPARDSTOWN.

THE GRAND PRIZE.

EASY VICTORY OF CYNOS.

If Saturday's racing went very much in favour of the punters, the same cannot be said of yesterday, when several outsiders came to the rescue of the bookmakers, who must have very nearly got back their losses of the opening afternoon. There was an excellent attendance in all departments, and the members' enclosure wore quite an animated aspect, the ladies mustering in greater numbers than has been the case for some time, and, fortunately, the weather was again favourable, though there was very little sunshine. The sport fully maintained the good standard set up on Saturday, and at least a couple of smart performances were registered in those of Cynos and Crowdennis, the former of which pair carried off the chief event.

This was the Grand Prize, for which a dozen two-year-olds—the biggest field of the day—turned out, and the majority passed muster well with the paddock critics. In point of looks, perhaps, Irish Hope, Melra, Toxaway, Soldumeno, and A.G. carried off the palm, and each of these was fancied by their respective connections, but none of them commanded as much support as Cynos, about whose prospects his veteran trainer, Maurice Reidy, was very sanguine. Nor was his confidence misplaced, as the sequel will show. The colt was unruly at the post, as was White Ornament, and between them they caused a delay of ten minutes; but when they were at length sent on their momentous journey, Cynos was one of the first to show in front, with Twenty-five, A.G., and Irish Hope in close attendance. These he had shaken off a furlong from the end, and, making light of the efforts of Killucan and Melra to catch him, Mr. W. C. Carr's game little chestnut won in a common canter. This smart achievement enhances the merit of Rabona, who beat him a head at the Curragh last month, and Reidy must be complimented on sending Cynos to the post in such excellent fettle for yesterday's race. Melra dwelt at the start, and lost ground, as did Toxaway; but though their doing so had not much bearing on the actual result, they would have been nearer the winner at the finish had they struck off as quickly.

Although there were only half a dozen runners for the Shankill Plate, that race was regarded as a very open affair, 3 to 1 being offered on the field, and at that price Ferdia and the stable companions, Dinia and Lowford, found friends. Neither of these, however, could fairly extend Ferdia, who scored in the easiest possible manner, and thus was not long about recouping Mr. H. Hartigan some of the money he gave Mr. J. A. Coen for him after winning at Phœnix Park last month. Accounted a trifle unlucky to succumb to Red Connors at Baldoyle, Battle Cell was served up a hot order for the Paddock Selling Plate, but second place was once again her lot, the outsider, Cast, catching and beating her in the last stride or two, after a rattling set-to. At the ensuing auction, the winner was purchased by Mr. J. J. Parkinson, the owner of the second, for 250 sovs.

The Stillorgan Plate furnished another exciting finish, Manser's Pride, who appeared to be hopelessly out of it half-way up the straight, swooping down on the leaders close home, and winning by a narrow margin from Bachelor's Mark, who was baulked in an attempt to come through on the rails. Crowdennis put up an excellent performance in carrying top weight to a ready victory in the Dun Laoghaire Plate, in which the well-backed Belsize signally failed to run up to expectations; and for the wind-up the hitherto disappointing Eagerloon, who started without a quotation, easily accounted for seven others in the Apprentices' Plate, in which the majority of the boys who rode shaped in promising fashion. Details:—

Ferdie settled down in front of Royal Cell, Lowford, Dinia, and Kilcruttin, with Battledore last. So they ran to the straight, where Lowford took second place, but never looked like catching Ferdia, who won in a canter by four lengths; half a length divided second and third. Dinia was fourth, Royal Cell fifth, and Battledore last.

Betting—7 to 2 agst. CYNOS, 5 to 1 each Melra, Soldumeno, and Irish Hope, 8 to 1 Toxaway, 10 to 1 Twenty-five, 100 to 8 Killucan or any other.

Melra and Toxaway began slowly, and Cynos, striking off the quickest, carried on the running from Twenty-five, A.G., Irish Hope, Killucan, Currabacle, and Soldumeno, with Living Machine at the head of the others. There was little change in the order until a furlong from home, when A.G. and Twenty-five lost their places, and Melra and Killucan improved their positions, but neither could make any impression on Cynos, who won easily by five lengths; a length divided second and third. Irish Hope was fourth, Twenty-five fifth, Currabacle sixth, Soldumeno seventh, Toxaway eighth, Bees in Clover ninth, and Living Machine next. Time—62 1-5 seconds.

Betting—5 to 2 agst. Mountbellew, 7 to 2 Zotos, 5 to 1 each Bachelor's Mark and Tipperary Boy, 6 to 1 MANSER'S PRIDE, 10 to 1 any other.

Dulcie Bridge set the pace to Mountbellew, Bachelor's Mark, Tipperary Boy, Zotos, and Golden Duke, with Manser's Pride last. Three furlongs from home Dulcie Bridge was beaten, and Mountbellew took command, followed by Bachelor's Mark, Tipperary Boy, Zotos, and Manser's Pride. Crowdennis jumped off in front of Fairy Lass, Wild Captive, Borora, and Belsize, with Irish Sailor last. At half-way Borora headed Crowdennis, but the latter drawing away again won easily by two lengths from Fairy Lass, with Wild Captive two and a half lengths off third. Borora was fourth, Belsize fifth, and Irish Sailor last.

EXCELLENT SPORT.

CLACKMANNAN'S SMART VICTORY.

The August Meeting at Colwick is usually the most important and successful of the season, and yesterday it must have been a record crowd, so difficult was it to move about in the various enclosures. There was much flooded ground in the neighbourhood, but none on the course—in fact, the going, in the circumstances, was quite good, and it was impossible to find fault with the sport. A particularly popular success was scored in the opening event, for the winner, Maple Sugar, carried the colours of the well-known local sportsman, Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Birkin, who commanded the Robin Hoods in the war. His brother, Colonel R. L. Birkin, is a Steward of the meeting, and both owners command an extensive local patronage here.

The Breeders' Foal Stakes signalised the reappearance of H.H. Aga Khan's charming filly, Cos, who had been so unlucky at Sandown at the start of the race won by Town Guard, was now only opposed by maidens, and of these Moonlight filly was the only one to be much supported against her. Few laid the odds on the winner. Those who accepted 6 to 4 about placing the first two failed in their attempt, when the Moonlight filly could only finish third. As a matter of fact, it was not a race, for Cos was cantering in front throughout, and another 14lb. in the saddle would not have altered the result. Cos sweated a good deal on returning to weigh in, but that was not due to any lack of condition, but rather to the close state of the atmosphere.

There had been a rumour that Archibald was in Paris, and that Clackmannan was not likely in consequence to run for the Three-Year-Old Handicap. But Pretty Polly's son not only ran, but Archibald rode him, and the combination scored a particularly smart victory. Recess had been greatly fancied, and in the end started the better favourite, but the best she could do was to finish third—rather a blow to the smart division connected with her.

Stanley Wootton's stable is in particularly good form at present, and by somewhat cleverly taking the Bentinck Plate Jack Patch showed a marked improvement on his recent form, and he evidently appreciates the more yielding going. The much-expected Tinder Box could never find sufficient pace to be prominent.

TO-DAY'S SELECTIONS.

A repetition to-day of yesterday's attendance at Colwick Park will enable the directorate of the meeting to declare a satisfactory return to their shareholders. We ought to witness a great race for the Stewards' Handicap to-day. It is almost a replica in appearance of the Goodwood Stewards' Cup. The names of many of the competitors for that popular scurry appear again here—namely, The Night Patrol (who carried 7st. 8lb. into second place), Orby's Pride, 8st. 3lb. (eighth), Little Boy, 6st. 12lb. (tenth), Proconsul, 8st. 11lb. (thirteenth), and King Sol, Service Kit, Lembach, Blackland, Volunteer, and Cruiser Arc further behind. Whichever Cottrill runs here, Leighton or Proconsul, will take its own part. I prefer the last-named. Both are set to concede weight for sex to Sister-in-Law. Taylor has Two Step also engaged, 4lb. lower. Sister-in-Law has to run Lucky Prince on equal terms, but she is probably of better class. Lemstar, Isle of Wight, The Night Patrol, and Soldennis are a formidable quartette, and, perhaps, win and place, may be a reliable investment.

Other selections:—
Friar Tuck Plate—Dutchman.
Oxton Plate—Stop Watch or Transom.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

During an interval of racing at Leopardstown yesterday a brown yearling filly by Black Jester—Simon Lass was sold by auction to Mr. Martin for 210 guineas.

Mr. H. P. Whitney has confirmed the sale of his horse Whiskaway to Mr. C. W. Clark, and has stated that the purchase price was 125,000 dollars, as reported.

Cynos, who won the Leopardstown Grand Prize in such impressive style yesterday, is engaged in the Phoenix Plate to be run at Phoenix Park on Saturday next. That race will be contested by a big field, and promises to be one of the most interesting of the season.

In connection with the disqualification of Grave Fairy at Leopardstown on Saturday, it should have been mentioned that Patman, her jockey, was exonerated from intentional foul riding.

PHŒNIX V. MR. R. M. GILLSON'S XI.

Phœnix were badly beaten in the Park yesterday by Mr. R. M. Gillson's XI., in a slow scoring match, by 99 runs. Burlton (7 for 15) and Furminger (2 for 9) dismissed Phœnix for 47, Winterbotham (14) being the only batsman to reach double figures. The visitors got the runs for the loss of two wickets, Carr (39) and Cowburn (24) making a stand for the third wicket. Kidd secured 6 wickets for 49, and Gregson-Ellis 2 for 12. Score:—

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

SURREY V. MIDDLESEX.

Hobbs yesterday at Kennington Oval, increasing his Saturday score of 62 to 112, registered his eighth hundred this season, and the ninety-seventh of his great career. In such brilliant form was he yesterday that he added the 50 runs in as many minutes, having batted altogether two hours and forty minutes when third out at 202. After reaching three figures he let out rather recklessly, but it was a wonderful catch which brought about his dismissal, Skeet running fully thirty yards and only just succeeding in crossing the ball. His masterly innings was free from serious blemish, and included a square leg hit for six and twelve fours. Hobbs received splendid assistance from Shepherd, the two batsmen, who had come together at 47 on Saturday, putting on altogether 155 in an hour and three-quarters. Shepherd, whose off driving was particularly good, stood the Middlesex attack for two hours and a quarter, among his strokes being eleven fours. Surrey lost their last five wickets in an hour and a half after lunch, but during that time added 105. In this vigorous work Fender had a chief hand, the Surrey captain inside fifty minutes making 62 out of 87 with ten fours, mainly drives, as his chief strokes. Surrey's innings in all extended over four hours and twenty minutes. Middlesex, on a drying pitch, made a deplorable start. They lost three wickets in fifty minutes for 34. Score:—

YORKSHIRE V. HAMPSHIRE.

A YORKSHIRE COLLAPSE.

When Yorkshire won the toss and went in first at Bradford yesterday on a wicket still very soft after the heavy rain, which had made Saturday a blank, they were dismissed for their smallest total of the season. Holmes and Sutcliffe scored 25 for the opening partnership, but afterwards the batting collapsed badly, and they were all out in two hours for 56 runs, owing to the fine bowling of Kennedy and Boyes, who were unchanged. Three times during the innings did Kennedy get two wickets with successive balls, and his seven wickets cost only 4 runs each. Then Hampshire, thanks to some bold hitting by Tennyson, who went in first and remained 48 minutes, scoring 51 out of 63, before being third out, passed Yorkshire's total with only one wicket down. Tennyson hit a 6 and 3 fours. However, seven wickets were down for 80. Then Mead and Lowry (who was twice missed) added 28, and eventually Hampshire had a lead of 57. Waddington, who did not go on until 44 had been scored, bowled splendidly, getting eight wickets. When Yorkshire went in again Kennedy and Boyes again bowled splendidly, and at the close Yorkshire seemed in a hopeless plight, being only 24 ahead, with four wickets standing. The pitch favoured the bowling throughout. Score:—

LANCASHIRE v. DERBYSHIRE.

Wickets went cheaply at Aigburth yesterday, after Lancashire and Derbyshire joined issue, after a day's delay, due to rain. When in a moist state the wicket at Liverpool is invariably treacherous, and yesterday 22 wickets fell for an aggregate of 263 runs, the outcome of which was that Derbyshire were 97 runs ahead, a menacing position for Lancashire. Desirous of shortening the match as much as possible, in view of the long journey to Hastings, the Lancashire captain, on winning the toss, took the risk of asking the visitors to bat first. This policy was justified, to the extent that a couple of wickets fell for 6, and four were down for 35, Parkin taking them all for 10; but Cadman and Morton carried the score to 79 before luncheon, and eventually, thanks to their partnership of 51 for the fifth wicket, the total reached 125 after two hours and 50 minutes' batting. Going in at 3.25 Lancashire gave an inglorious exhibition. True, the ball turned after the sun had affected the wicket, but the bowling was flattered by the dismissal of the home county in 95 minutes. A stylish innings of half an hour's duration by Watson was the only redeeming feature, beyond a characteristic effort by Parkin, who hit 3 fours. Derbyshire, who had 50 minutes' batting, scored 55 runs for two wickets. Score:—

	1st Inns.	2nd Inns.
Derbyshire	125	55 (2 wkts.)
Lancashire	83

SOMERSET v. KENT.

An unusually large crowd saw a very interesting day's play at Taunton yesterday, where Kent finished up 94 runs ahead with nine wickets in hand. Their first innings was an unusual study in contrast, for after scoring 148 for three in two hours and a half before lunch, they subsequently lost seven wickets in forty minutes for 22 runs, thanks mainly to a wonderful spell of bowling by White, who on the resumption claimed the wickets of Hardinge, Hedges, Hubble, Collins, and Ashdown. Hardinge batted without fault for his 59 for two hours and a half, during which he seven times got the ball to the boundary, and also hit two 3's and two 2's; but Woolley (53) was singularly lucky, for when he had scored a single Greswell failed to hold a return from him, and Young missed him at deep long off, while Lowry, in front of the pavilion, badly dropped him at 9 and 21. The Somerset innings, which lasted two hours, was disappointing, for MacBryan (34) alone batted with confidence, and after Woolley had taken three wickets in one over at 81, the rest of the side failed feebly. Woolley was finely supported in the field, Bryan bringing off three excellent catches at long off, the one that dismissed Johnson being particularly clever. Score:—

	1st Inns.	2nd Inns.

WORCESTER v. GLAMORGAN.

Glamorgan at Worcester yesterday had a deal the better of the match with the home county, inasmuch as the visitors after scoring 255 got out seven of the home batsmen for 99 runs. The position of Glamorgan was due chiefly to Riches, who played a fine innings of 128, while J. B. Higgins (45) and Pinch (33) also showed plenty of skill. Worcester collapsed badly after the dismissal of Bowley for 26, but Pearson (13) and Crawley (not out 29) stemmed the rot somewhat. Score:—

Glamorgan	255
Worcester (7 wkts.)	99

ESSEX v. GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

That Essex were enabled to gain a lead of 139 over Gloucestershire at Leyton yesterday, when each side had completed an innings, was entirely due to their more consistent batting and the splendid bowling of Douglas, Dixon, and Russell. Essex went on to complete their innings for 308, the outstanding feature of the day being the resolute batting of C. T. Ashton and Douglas. They played with so much freedom that in less than an hour their partnership yielded 76 for the fifth wicket. Ashton, whose 75 occupied an hour and forty minutes, made no mistake. He brought off many characteristic off drives, and hit a six, two fours, and eight threes. Douglas (46) was seventh to leave after batting for eighty minutes. Gloucestershire started batting immediately after lunch, and were dismissed in three hours for 169. Against the bowling by Douglas (4 for 52) and Dixon (2 for 30) half the side were out for 40. Then Townsend (61) and Mills (19) pulled the game round, adding 60 in an hour for the seventh wicket. Parker played stylish cricket for forty minutes for 41, but the last 3 wickets fell for 3. Essex then lost 2 for 26. Score:—

	1st Inns.	2nd Inns.
Essex	308	26 (2)
Gloucestershire	169

WARWICKSHIRE v. NORTHANTS.

On an easy-paced wicket at Edgbaston yesterday Warwickshire batted for five hours for 288, and in thirty-five minutes dismissed one of the visiting batsmen for 28. The display of the home county was uneven, but was redeemed by one or two exhilarating periods. For instance, the first wicket partnership of Smith (55) and Fiddian Green (18) produced 73 runs in an hour, of which Smith, who hit 9 fours, claimed 55. At lunch three wickets were down for 105, while Calthorpe (63) and Quaife (57) were associated while 85 were added for the fourth wicket. Quaife was batting three hours and ten minutes, and Pugh, the Rugby captain, showing sound defence, contributed only four in half-an-hour. Hampton also shaped well, Baynton was the central figure in another bright period, claiming 25 out of 27. In one over from Woolley he hit 4 successive fours. Northants batted in indifferent light. Timms put on 27 with Woolley before the former was caught at the wicket. At 6.20 an appeal on the ground of bad light was successful, and stumps were drawn. Score:—

	1st Inns.
Warwickshire	288
Northants	28 (1 wkt.)

LANCASHIRE AND BLOMLEY.

The Lancashire County Cricket Committee have decided to make a grant of £500 to Blomley, who for 19 years has been at the service of the county team as wicket-keeper.

SUSSEX v. LEICESTERSHIRE.

A thoroughly interesting day's cricket took place at Hastings yesterday, and, with a keen fight going on all the time, the proceedings pleased a fine company of spectators. Thanks to the splendid batting of Tate and Arthur Gilligan, Sussex, who began 17 behind, with two wickets to fall, secured a lead on the first innings of 59. An hour's cricket in the morning yielded an addition of 86 to Saturday's score of 131 for eight wickets. Tate and Gilligan put on 61 for the ninth wicket in less than 40 minutes, the Sussex captain making some powerful drives. Tate was last out, having batted skilfully for an hour and three-quarters for 88. Going in again Leicestershire made 59 for one wicket before luncheon; but after that, against good bowling and brilliant fielding, they had to fight hard for runs. Fowke batted soundly for 75 minutes (for 41) and Astill 50 minutes (for 37), Astill and Sharp adding 63 in three-quarters of an hour for the fourth wicket; but seven men were out for 186, thanks to Sharp, who was in two hours and a half, and batted admirably all the time. Leicestershire made 245, and set Sussex 177 to get. Sussex had 20 minutes' batting before the close, and lost two wickets for 17, before bad light stopped play. Score:—

	1st Inns.	2nd Inns.
Leicestershire	148	245
Sussex	217	17 (2 wkts.)

THE COUNTY QUALIFICATION.

Belmont, Faversham,
August 14th, 1922.

Dear Sir,—You are very welcome to my views as regards the case of Mr. Jeacocke, but as, according to your letter, there has been some adverse criticism of the Kent Committee and myself, I will ask your permission to make my reply through the Press. The Kent Committee does not conceive it to be its duty to hunt about the country for cases on suspicion, but where it knows its facts it does think itself bound, in loyalty to its colleagues (the first-class Counties), to ask for an inquiry through the Committee of the M.C.C., and in the cases you refer to it was proved that their statement of facts was correct. The qualification rules are not those of the M.C.C. They are imposed on themselves by the first-class Counties, and the Counties have selected as referee the Committee of the M.C.C., a large body, including a number of cricketers of high position on the cricket field and of long experience. The facts in Mr. Jeacocke's case are that he lost his qualification of bona fide residence in Surrey in August, 1920, and has since played for Surrey under the rule which allows a cricketer to play for two years for his old county whilst qualifying for another county by bona fide residence. It is incorrect that Mr. Jeacocke has ever been invited to play for Kent. Some two years or more ago, Kent was asked whether they would play him, but on asking for his qualification, replied at once that he was not qualified. As regards the case of Hammond, of Gloucestershire, we knew that he was born in Kent, and that his bona fide residence was with his mother in Hampshire. His occasional residence at school in Gloucestershire was no qualification, for the Counties had specifically barred such a residence as a qualification. I am glad to say that my conscience does not prick me, and I am not aware that my colleagues of the Kent Committee are suffering from any contrition, because we have done our best to secure respect for the rules laid down by the Counties. If Kent has erred, it is open to the Counties, at the next Advisory Committee, to pass a vote of censure. So much as regards the particular cases. Now a word as regards the general question. Bolshevism is rampant and seeks to abolish all laws and rules, and this year cricket has not escaped its attack. If the Counties so choose, they can scrap their qualification rules and resort to "go as you please" and "catch as catch can," but I will wager, at very long odds, that County Committees will do nothing of the kind. But it is indisputable, as the M.C.C. Committee knows to its cost, that the qualification rules are sometimes most difficult to construe, and, knowing this, and wishing very earnestly to remove the obstructions to young cricketers playing County cricket, I repeated last year a previous attempt to substitute a system of registration for qualification rules, but the Counties declined to make the change. The pavilion dressing-rooms are rife with insinuations against this County and that County for playing this cricketer and that cricketer without a proper qualification, and that will go on until the Counties adopt a simpler form of qualification, or follow the example of Kent, and, where they know the facts, invite inquiry by the M.C.C. I hope this gives you the information you sought,

Faithfully yours,
(Signed.) HARRIS.

GOLF.

AMERICANS AND AMATEUR STATUS.

ACTION OF U.S. ASSOCIATION.

When the personnel of the team to represent Great Britain in the International matches in America was announced from St. Andrews, considerable surprise was occasioned by the non-inclusion of certain well-known amateurs who were regarded as most likely to be selected for the tour.

Subsequently it was stated officially that, in order not to disturb the existing friendly relations between the golfing authorities of the respective countries, only players who conformed strictly to the American definition of the amateur status had been invited to play for Great Britain in the States.

The matter has now taken definite shape in America. According to a Press Association Chicago telegram received yesterday, William Hunter, the ex-Amateur Champion of Great Britain, has been declared ineligible to compete in the forthcoming American Amateur Championship, the United States Golf Association having ruled that Hunter and several others have played under conditions making their amateur status questionable.

GAELIC ATHLETIC PASTIMES.

AUSTRALIA'S TAILTEANN REPRESENTTIVE.

BY PATO.

Having been fêted and honoured by his club-mates, receiving farewell banquets and purses of sovereigns from his countrymen; having a hearty send-off from scores of friends and associates; bearing a laudatory letter of introduction from Dr. Mannix, Archbishop of Melbourne; and having travelled half-way round the world—it was disconcerting to discover that one's journey was vain. Yet this was the experience of Paul J. Carroll, Australia's sole representative for the Tailteann Games.

A quiet, gentlemanly boy—for he is little more—he treats the disappointment philosophically, speaks of his next season's prospects, and so much does he like Ireland and its hospitality, that he says, "I was lonely at first; now I do not like to go home."

We had read of Carroll in the American and Australian Press as a versatile runner of unusual talent, but under short notice did not think he would undertake the long journey to Ireland. Some Irish-Australians, however, decided on being represented at Aonach Tailteann; funds were raised, and young Carroll was selected to represent the land of his birth at the revived celebration in the land of his forefathers. Well-knit and muscular, scaling 11½ stone, and just turned 23 years, he looks the athlete all over. He stands 5 feet 9½ inches, or more. I have watched him training. He runs in the approved smooth orthodox style of the early-trained athlete. He has been running since he was sixteen, and has won at every distance on the flat, from 100 yards to a mile, whilst across country he has five and six miles races to his credit. But middle distances are his forte. In Australia, each State is almost a distinct country, and the Victorian Championship is virtually championship of the Commonwealth.

In the Victorian Championship, he won the half-mile in 1919, 1920, and 1921, his best time being 1 min. 59 secs. In 1920 he won the mile in 4 mins. 32 secs., and was second in 1921. He is this season's champion over the quarter-mile, and his time, 50 4-5, suggests his finishing close up to the speediest of the Americans had Aonach Tailteann Competitions materialised. Against a South African team last season, he won the 600 yards race in 1 min. 15 secs., and this seems the very best of his performances.

On the boat over, Carroll had no opportunity of training, but is now getting into shape, and is looking forward eagerly to the Clonliffe Harriers' meeting on Saturday week. He hopes to perform creditably in the quarter and half, and is anxious to get an invitation quarter-mile short handicap on the programme.

In private life Carroll is a pleasing personality. For some years he has been captain of the leading athletic team in Melbourne—the Carleton Harriers. His appearance on the Lansdowne road track is looked forward to with considerable interest.

IRISH STOCK EXCHANGES.

DUBLIN.

FUNDS BUSY AND HIGHER GENERALLY. BANK STOCK LOWER: GUINNESS FLUCTUATING. COTTONS, TOBACCOS, AND OILS BETTER.

There was really no outstanding feature on 'Change. Occasionally realisations were more in evidence, but without disturbing prices very much. The holiday influences of the present time must not be overlooked in accounting for the prevailing stagnation in business, quite outside other influences making for dulness. The Funds were the best market, and on balance higher prices were reached. Banks were fairly busy, with Bank of Ireland, recently on offer, 1 lower. There was a much quieter market for Guinness Ord. shares, and the price gave way on profit-taking, but closed busy at a recovery. Marconis closed dull. Home Rails more or less marked time, and Tramways were quiet. Dunlop Rubber Ord. were weaker. Among Drapery shares Pim Bros. Pref. improved, and Bolands Debs. were also better. Tobacco shares remain firm, and Textiles were also supported. Oils improved.

The Funds were busy. War Loan 4½ p.c. rose 1⅛ to 97⅝, Funding Loan ¼ to 89⅝, Victory Bonds ¼ to 90⅞, Irish Land 3 p.c. ¼ to 64⅞, and India 3½ p.c. ⅜ to 68⅝. On the other hand, Consols fell ¼ to 58⅝ and Conversion 3½ p.c. 1/16 to 76 11/16, while War Loan 5 p.c. repeated 100 11/16 and ditto 4½ p.c. (Tax free) 102.

Banks varied occasionally. Bank Stock fell 1 to 229 for a broken lot, but Provincial rose 1/16 to 20 1/16. Hibernians at 6⅝, Munsters at 6 11/16, and Nationals at 17 show no alteration.

Dealing in Breweries was confined to Guinness issues. The Ord. relapsed 1/16 to 47⅛ at one time, but later were active up to 47½, and the Pref. repeated 11⅛.

Marconi Ord. fell 6d. to 46s.

Home Rails were little effected. Dublin and South-Eastern repeated 19, the Pref. 46 1/16, and the "B" Debs. 64. Midland Great Western 4 p.c. Pref. rose 11/16 to 49, and the 4 p.c. Debs. again realised 62½ and Great Northern Debs. 75½.

In Trams Dublin United repeated 6⅝, but the Pref. fell 1/16 to 10.

Alliance and Dublin Consumers Gas fell ⅛ to 6⅛.

Dunlop Rubber Ord. fell 3d. to 8s. 3d. Parent Tyre issues were neglected.

In Bakery shares Bolands Debs. rose 1/16 to 7, and in Drapery shares Pim Bros. Pref. rose 2s. 6d. to 82s. 6d., and Switzer Debs. changed hands at 5 5/16.

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

THOMAS DOCKRELL, SONS AND CO.—The directors have declared the following interim dividends for the half-year ended June 30th:—At the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the Preference shares, and at the rate of 4 per cent. (4 4-5d. per share) per annum on the Ordinary shares, both less income tax. Dividends payable 26th inst. The interim dividend is unchanged.

SWITZER AND CO.—Interim dividend of 6 per cent. (3/- per share) per annum, free of tax, declared on the Ordinary shares for six months ended 31st July, 1922, and usual dividend on Prefs. Last year the interim was 4 per cent. per annum (2/- per share).

D. DAVIS AND SONS.—Interim dividend of 3 per cent., actual, less tax, on Pref. shares.

WELSH NAVIGATION STEAM COAL.—Interim dividend of 3½ per cent. actual (less tax) upon Preference shares for six months ended June 30th.

KAYS ATLAS BREWERY.—Net profit £18,939, and £26,963 was brought forward. Final dividend of 4½ per cent. on Ordinary shares, (making 7½ for the year; also bonus on Ordinary of 5 per cent., less tax; to reserve, £5,000; carried forward, £26,948.

THOMAS DE LA RUE.—The report states that, after providing £18,612 for repairs, £17,491 for directors' remuneration and fees, £52,680 for loss on branches, and £38,848 for interest on Debenture stock and loans, the accounts for the year ending December 31st, 1921, show a loss of £89,599. To this amount has to be added £7,692, amount short realised on India contract, 1919 and 1920, and £3,500 for the dividend on the Preference shares for the half-year to June 30th, 1921. This total debit balance of £89,599 has been extinguished by the large sum brought forward—viz., £88,425, the transfer of £9,840 from the general reserve, and the £2,517 over-reserved for taxes.

WARING AND GILLOW.—The report for the year to January 31st last states that the loss on trading account, including interest on investments and transfer fees and losses on subsidiary companies provided for out of reserve for investments in subsidiary companies, and after allowing for depreciation, bad and doubtful debts, amortisation of leases, directors' fees, auditors' fees, and trustees' remuneration, amounts to £71,293. The balance on profit and loss account carried forward at January 31st, 1921, amounted to £1,128,670. After paying taxes, dividend on Pref. shares, and sinking fund for Debentures a balance of £39,917 is carried forward.

GENERAL MINING AND FINANCE CORPORATION.—The report to be submitted at the annual meeting to be held in Johannesburg on the 21st September next states that the working profit for the year ended 31st December, 1921, after deducting administration expenses, etc., amounted to £65,273. From this, however, it was necessary to write off losses in respect of mining ventures and stocks and shares realised amounting to £24,927, leaving a balance, being profit for the year carried to balance sheet, of £40,346. To this must be added the unappropriated profit brought forward from the previous year, making a total credit of appropriation account of £174,047. The Corporation's holdings of shares and Debentures show a depreciation in the aggregate of £1,186,786, if taken at the market prices obtaining at 31st December, 1921, as compared with a depreciation of £1,189,744 at the close of the previous year. The directors point out that this depreciation is largely in holdings in dormant concerns, and does not represent a realised loss.

POLITICS AND STOCKS.

THE CONFERENCE BREAKDOWN.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT AND THE "FINANCIAL NEWS" OF TO-DAY.)

General conditions were decidedly unpropitious for the opening yesterday of the new Stock Exchange term. Over the week-end the political atmosphere had been highly charged, and in consequence the accumulation of investment orders was much smaller than usual. News of the breakdown of the Reparations Conference at Downing street had no more drastic effect than to deaden the tone somewhat. National War Bonds and gilt-edged Stocks generally, with the exception of Consols and Funding Loan, which enjoyed a mild increase of strength, all became dull on the political impasse. Colonial issues were not brisk, though where prices showed any change the movements were all in an upward direction. It seems to be a fair assumption that, apart from an inevitable restriction of business, the closing of the Downing street Conference will merely be reflected in securities that are identified with the French capital, such as Kaffir shares and certain Oil shares and Foreign Bonds. The situation is almost bound to cause some nervousness, based on an apprehension that Paris might turn round a seller of some of her favourites. Otherwise the Stock Exchange does not anticipate any serious interference from the course which political events have taken. Certainly nothing in the nature of an upheaval is apprehended. The Grand Trunk market became a centre of lively interest owing to the keen attention devoted to Grand Trunk Pacific 4 p.c. Debs., which changed hands during the day as high as 43½ and as low as 37. They closed at 37-40, and according to the list show a rise of about 9 points since Friday's closing. Inquiries in the market revealed absolutely no knowledge of the whys and wherefores of this appreciation, which is simply ascribed to a gamble on the part of the public on the presumption that the Canadian Government is going to recognise this stock. All the same, the market professedly cannot understand why such a stock should have come up from 25 to its present high level. Underground Stocks provided the best feature of the Home Railway market, which was generally of a dullish character, price movements tending chiefly downward. Foreign Rails were irregular. B.A. Great Southerns were an outstanding feature of strength among Argentine Rails, and in the Brazilian group Leopoldinas had a sharp rise. The time has arrived for the presentation of the Brazilian Budget, and there are anticipations that some provision regarding increased freight rates for the Brazilian railways may be included in it. This, at any rate, has influenced the buying of Leopoldinas.

LONDON STOCKS QUIET.

VERY LITTLE BUSINESS.

Business was on a very small scale in the Stock Markets yesterday. Uncertainty regarding the outcome of the London Conference had a restricting influence. There was no accumulation of orders over the week-end, but, though transactions were so few, the tone remained good as a whole. There were firm spots in the Industrial Market, and a good amount of support was accorded to Kaffirs. Gilt-edged issues were stagnant. The only quotable change was in Victory Bonds, which lost ¼ at 90½.

FOREIGNERS were also of a neglected appearance, though Brazil 5 per cent. Funding Bonds rose a point to 84, and Egyptian Unified gained ½ at 70½, and Uruguay 3½, at 56½, were also ½ to the good. Argentine 5 per cent., 1886, at 99, lost 1. French Loan repeated 38½.

HOME RAILS showed no activity. Great Easterns fell ½ to 39½ x.d., and Great Central Def. shed ¼ at 9⅞. Metropolitan Districts and North Eastern Cons. were both ½ easier, but Underground Electric Inc. Bonds rose a point to 84½.

CANADIAN PACIFICS were unchanged, as were also Grand Trunks. Argentine Great Western Ord. lost a point at 62, but Entre Rios 6 per cent. Pref., at 61, were a point to the good. Leopoldinas were again in quiet request, and at 31½ were ½ better. Mexicans were quiet at previous levels.

OIL SHARES BETTER.

DEMAND FOR LEADERS.

Although business in Oil shares yesterday was of a less active character than during the closing days of last week the volume of transactions was, nevertheless, quite satisfactory, and higher prices were quoted for certain of the leading counters and speculative favourites. The report to the effect that the Reparations Conference had broken down produced no effect, probably for the reason that the stocks most likely to be influenced are those dealt in on the Paris bourse, and it was, therefore, fortunate that Paris is closed until Wednesday. Preference issues were in good request and generally finished higher, a good feature among these descriptions being Mexican Eagles 7 p.c. Prefs. Among the leaders Shells continued to receive attention, and changed hands fairly freely at advancing prices, and Royal Dutch also enjoyed support, an appreciable improvement resulting from the day's business. Anglo-Persians and Burmahs, however, had a slightly easier tendency. Among the more speculative favourites, British Controlled came into prominence, active bidding resulting in sharp advances in both the Common and Pref. It was announced in the afternoon by the British Controlled Oilfields that Well No. 11 in the Western Division of the Buchivaca Oilfields commenced spouting on Friday last at a depth of 1,248 feet green oil 36 deg. Beaume. Rumanian descriptions had an improving tendency under the lead of Phœnix, but apart from a small gain in Centrals there was little of interest in the Trinidad group. Closing prices:—

LONDON MINING MARKET SUBDUED.

CAPE FAVOURITES IN DEMAND.

The threatened deadlock of the reparations discussion was the chief factor at the opening of the "House" yesterday, but most markets maintained a firm appearance in spite of there being little accumulation of orders over the week-end. As regards the mining section, business in Kaffirs was somewhat subdued, except for one or two Cape favourites. Robinson Deep "A," and East Rands were prominent in this respect, although the last-named closed below the best. The "generals" report shows that since the strike working conditions have improved considerably, with the result that working costs are steadily falling. Approximately 800,000 ex enemy shares were purchased from the Union Custodian, and these are to be utilised in reducing the issued capital of 1,875,000 shares, while the difference between the nominal value of £1 and the purchase price of 2s. will be available for writing off depreciation of assets. This action completely alters the future outlook of the Company. Gold remained unchanged at 92s. 5d. Central Mining, Rand Mines, and "Johnnies" were easier on the day, but "Gold Trusts" were bid for, while the declines were not of any great importance. In the Rhodesian section, Chartered were easier, despite the speech made by General Smuts, and Lonely Reef also declined, but Globe and Phoenix further advanced, and Gaika Gold improved. Diamonds were quiet, the De Beers issues closing steady, but Jagersfontein met with support and moved up. Tin recovered a further 3s. 9d. to £158 16s. 3d., but the share market was undisturbed. In the "Jungle," however, Fanti Consols and Gold Coast Amalgamated came into request on rumours that these companies had been successful in negotiating their Manganese contracts. Australians were inclined to harden in a few instances, but Broken Hill Props were unaffected by the publication of the annual report. An improvement in Rio Tintos constituted the only feature in Copper shares, while among Russians a reaction in Russos was caused by profit-taking. In other directions, Burma Corporation came in for support, but Esperanza eased a trifle on the discouraging nature of the latest development cable. Silver fell ⅛d. to 34⅛d. per oz. Closing prices:—

RUBBER SHARES IRREGULAR.

In the absence of business, the quiet irregularity which has of late characterised the Rubber Share Market continued. Labu rose 1s. 6d. to 20s. 3d., and Straits Rubber, at 16s. 10½d., were 1s. 1½d. better. Vallambrosa, United Sumatra, Sennah, London Asiatic, Kamuning, and Anglo-Malay were all a little easier, while Bukit Royal fell 1s., as did also Lanadron, while Sialang, Ledbury, and Langkat Sumatra fell 1s. 3d. Rubber Trusts repeated 14s. 6d., and Anglo-Dutch remained at 27s. 3d. The price of rubber remained at 7½d. per lb. Closing prices:—

INDUSTRIALS FIRM.

IMPROVING BUSINESS.

The breakdown of the Reparations Conference had practically no effect on the Miscellaneous and Industrial markets yesterday. A distinctly firm appearance was displayed by almost all departments, with signs of an improvement in the volume of business put through. There was a good demand for the first-class issues, and several movements of interest were to be seen at the close of business. Harrods finished 1s. 6d. higher at 29s. 6d. on the announcement of the interim dividend, and the Prefs. put on 9d. to 24s. Elsewhere in the Stores group, Whiteleys rose sharply to 38s. 9d., or 1s. 9d. better on the day. John Barkers kept at 47s., and Selfridge 6 p.c. Prefs. at 24s. 6d. Army and Navy Co-Operatives, however, eased to 21s. Very little of interest transpired among Textiles; Courtaulds hardened to 51s. 3d., and Amalgamated Cottons to 14s. 9d. Crosses and Winkworth Prefs. exhibited firmness at 16s. 6d. Coats still ruled at 65s., and Fine Spinners at 40s. In the Banking list, Hong Kong and Shanghai rose 1 to 119. Standards of South Africas gained ¼ at 12½, while Lloyds improved to 58s. 6d., and L.C.W. and Parrs to 17⅝. Barclays A fell 1/16 to 7⅜, and Union of Australia ¼ to 13¼. Among Insurances, Phœnix rose ⅛ to 10⅛, but London and Scottish gave way to 3½. Caterers kept firm, with J. Lyons further advancing to 4⅛. A.B.C.'s continued at 33s., and Liptons at 25s. 6d. Among Foodstuffs, Van Den Berghs gained 1/16 at ½, and J. Travers 1/16 at 1 11/16. Liebigs rose ¼ to 131. Breweries continued to show to advantage, and Guinness recovered to 470, and Hoare gained ⅛ at 9⅞. Watney Combe 3½ p.c. Debs. rose 1 to 68½, and the Def. ruled at 240½. Benskins were maintained at 17s. 6d., while the Prefs. rose ⅛ to 3⅛. Renewed support was forthcoming for Nobel Industries in the Ammunition group, and the price finished 9d. better at 15s. 3d., while the Prefs. held their ground at 18s. 6d., and the Def. exhibited firmness at 4s. 9d.

Among Coal Stocks, Powell, Duffryns, after changing hands at up to 34s., closed 6d. higher at 33s. 6d., while Norths Navigations recovered to 6s. 3d. Pease and Partners continued in demand in the Iron and Steel section, and put on another 6d. to 27s. 6d., and Sheffield Steel Products hardened to 2s. 3d., and the Debs. rose a point to 72. Babcock and Wilcox further receded to 57s. 6d., and J. Brown 15s. paid fell 6d. to 12s. 6d. B.S.A. closed a few pence lower at 9s. 6d., as did also Bolckow Vaughans at 18s. 6d. Vickers kept firm at 12s., and the tax free Prefs. at 17s. 3d. ex div. The only noticeable movement among Shipping issues was a further advance in Furness Withys to 2s., or 9d. better on the day. In Tramways, British Electric Tractions further improved to 60, and Anglo-Argentine First Prefs. gained 1/16 at 3⅛. Bays recovered to 6⅝ in the Land group, and the Prefs. kept at 4⅛. Pahangs rose 3d. to 5s. 3d., and Yang Tse Corporation strengthened to 4s. 6d. Forestals remained at 18s. 3d. and Sudan Plantations at 4⅛. British North Borneos eased to 11s., and City of San Paulo Improvements to 5s. 3d. Among Canadian Americans, Brazilian Tractions rose ½ to 50, and Spanish River Pulp and Paper Common and Pref. 3 and 5 points each to 102½ and 111½ respectively. In the Wireless group, Marconis exhibited strength and rose to 2⅜, or ⅛ higher on the day, while the Prefs. gained 1/16 at 2 1/16. Marines improved to 1 11/16, and Canadians put on 9d. to 11s. 3d. Among Cables, Easterns lost ½ at 185, and Globes ⅛ at 19½. Westerns closed 1/16 lower at 18 11/16. A little irregularity was noticeable among Nitrates. B.A.T.S. and Imperials continued in demand among Tobaccos. The former put on 1s. to 88s., and the latter 9d. to 68s. 3d. Canadians improved to 21s. 6d., and United Tobacco Souths were wanted and rose to 38s. Among Miscellaneous Trading Concerns, Wall Paper Def. improved to 8s., and Borax Def. to 1 11/16. Nestle Prefs. still ruled at 18s. British and Argentine Meats strengthened to 28s. 3d. Cement issues showed no changes. Dunlops closed slightly easier at 8s. 4½d.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

The shares of the leading textile combines have not attracted a great deal of attention recently, but a revival of interest may be expected during the autumn. There is a very confident feeling in Lancashire that the cotton industry will be more active in the last three months of the year than at any time since the slump. Whether there will be enough business to put all spindles and looms on full time is open to question (says the Evening Standard), but it must not be forgotten that, owing to the shorter working week, it takes far less business to fill up Lancashire than it did before the war. As a matter of fact, the great "boom" was the product of an export demand that was only about two-thirds of what it was pre-war. After two years of exceedingly small buying, which has reduced stocks in the big centres to probably the lowest level ever known, a revival would appear to be inevitable. It would be inevitable if the exchanges of the world had been normal, and if the slump had not seriously reduced the amount of capial at the disposal of merchants. On a black list, which has been compiled in Manchester for the guidance of merchants, appear the names of no fewer than eight hundred defaulters, representing a total sum owing that is very large.

Nobel's Industries shares are developing into a better market, considerable lines being absorbed by the North. This is, perhaps, not surprising. Out of last year's profits, besides paying 5 p.c. on the Ord. shares, the Company was able to increase its carry forward, a part of which was to be utilised as a special investment account. Business is reported to be improving; indeed, seeing that the Company is interested in explosives, chemicals, small arms, motors, tyres, and so on, it should be difficult for the Company to miss its share of any trade that may be passing.

COMPANY MEETING.

NO CHEAPER BEER.

At the annual meeting of Bass and Co. yesterday, Colonel John Gretton, M.P., said that the public, naturally and rightly, were demanding a reduction in the present price of beer, which depended entirely on the enormously heavy taxation now imposed. It was quite impossible to reduce the price a penny per pint retail, except by a reduction of the tax. No brewery could reduce the price and pay a dividend. In the case of Bass a reduction of a penny per pint would involve the whole of the dividend to the Ordinary shareholders, the Preference shareholders, and the Debenture interest, and would absorb, in addition, a sum exceeding one million. The breweries were helpless to move until Parliament saw its way clear to reduce the taxation. A dividend of 11 per cent. for the year, free of tax, was declared.

THE MONEY MARKET.

ACUTE STRINGENCY IN LOMBARD STREET.

FALL IN THE MARK.

With maturities very small and floating supplies of credit diminished by preparations for revenue payments and railway dividends, the position in Lombard street was acute. The cable interruption with New York still caused considerable inconvenience, and quite a fair amount had to be borrowed from the Bank of England for the week at 3½ p.c.

Night money commanded 1½ to 2½ p.c., with more occasionally paid, while fixtures were going on at 1½ p.c. Hardly any demand existed for bills owing to the tension in money, and as a consequence discount rates were distinctly firm, with fine three months' bank bills quoted 2¼-2½ p.c. Second-hand Treasuries were offering at 2 p.c. and over without attracting any buying, and forward business was very small.

Gold remained at 92s. 5d. per oz. nominal in the absence of supplies. Bar silver was ⅛d. lower at 34⅛d. per oz. for both spot and forward delivery.

The uncertainty surrounding the outcome of the Conference caused a reactionary movement in the rates for foreign exchange. Business was on a small scale. German marks fell away sharply to 3,700, and French francs were cheaper, too, at 55.20, Belgium being 58.20. Sterling was fairly steady on New York at 4.46⅛, while Holland was rather easier at 11.49, Switzerland being 23.43-23.48. Argentine dollars jumped to 44 11/16 on loan rumours. Prague showed a further appreciation to 165-170. The following are closing quotations:—

CRUSHED BY LORRY.

INQUEST ON LAW CLERK.

Dr. Louis Byrne held an inquest at the Adelaide Hospital yesterday respecting the death of Eugene Doyle, Iveagh House, Bride street, Dublin, who succumbed to injuries caused by a lorry, the property of Messrs. Boileau and Boyd.

Mr. Gleeson (instructed by Mr. Scott) appeared for the next-of-kin.

Mr. Dockrell (instructed by Messrs. Findlater and Co.), appeared for Messrs. Boileau and Boyd.

The Coroner said that the facts, as reported to him, were that on the 8th inst. Doyle was walking along Bride street when the horse attached to a dray ran away, and getting on the footpath the shaft of the car struck Doyle on the back.

James Doyle, 3 Lisburn street, identified the remains as those of his brother, whose age was 61. His occupation was that of a solicitor's clerk, in the employment of Messrs. J. A. Scott.

A constable stated that while on duty in Bride street he found Doyle being assisted by some civilians. He had scratches on his face and right hand, and stated that while walking along Bride street on the footpath a horse and float, the property of Boileau and Boyd, suddenly came up behind, and the shaft struck him against the side of a house.

To Mr. Gleeson—He saw the driver of the float, but did not caution him.

Edward Finn, 12 Poolbeg street, the driver of the float, stated that he left the horse and float outside Boileau and Boyd's with the chain on the wheel. While inside he heard shouts that the horse had gone away, and, going down the street, he found two men bringing the horse back. He always chained the wheel before leaving the animal.

Further evidence showed that when the horse got on the footpath a man in front of Doyle had to jump on to the roadway to escape the animal.

The House Surgeon stated that death was due to bronchial pneumonia caused by the injuries received to the chest as the result of the accident.

Mr. Dockrell, on behalf of his clients, expressed sympathy with the relatives of Doyle.

Mr. Gleeson said the fact that the horse was left unattended was negligence on the part of the owners.

The jury found in accordance with the medical testimony, exonerated the driver from all blame, and recommended the relatives to the consideration of Messrs. Boileau and Boyd.

LIVERPOOL, Monday.—WHEAT—Lower quotations from America fully counteracted the more moderate week's shipments, and speculative positions showed a fair decline at the commencement of operations. Pressure to sell caused a further sharp fall, and under a natural reaction and afternoon cables not so bad as expected, a partial recovery took place, but final rates showed a heavy loss on the day. C.i.f. parcels showed about 1/- per quarter decline. No. 2 hard winter afloat sold at 46/6, July-August 45/6, and Rosario-Santa Fe 63½lbs. arrived 48/- per quarter. C.i.f. parcels of MAIZE fully 6d. lower. American mixed September sold at 29/10½, October 29/10½ to 29/6, and River Plate afloat quoted 39/- and loading 37/3 per quarter. Then values recovered somewhat, though final rates showed a loss on the day of 3d. for September and 1½d. December delivery, but steady in tone. Sales—200 loads at 9/10½ down to 9/7½, up to 9/8½ for September, and 9/6½ to 9/6½ down to 9/4½ and up to 9/5½ for December delivery. Yellow River Plate and American mixed maize options nominal.

LIVERPOOL, Monday.—BACON—Cable advices from Chicago were less favourable with regard to both live hogs and speculative products, while past week's shipments were fair, but little bacon entered at Liverpool over the week end. There was no new feature in the situation here, holders again offering sparingly, and with a fair demand bellies were raised partially 1/- per cwt. to 96/- to 100/-, and other prices fully maintained. HAMS were again freely offered at decidedly lower prices, but there was rather more inquiry at the decline. Long cut quoted 114/- to 120/-, short cut 108/- to 116/-, and extra skinned 130/- to 135/- per cwt. Shoulders quiet, and picnics reduced to 74/- to 80/- per cwt. Canadian Wiltshires still scarce, and are now held for 135/- to 140/-, with Irish and Continental firm. LARD on the spot again moves fairly at late rates for all descriptions, American refined in boxes attracting most attention. CHEESE more firmly held owing to higher Canadian c.i.f. quotations, and a little more inquiry was experienced at late rates. BUTTER stronger on a sharp rise in Copenhagen and better demand. LINSEED CAKES—Shipments of foreign descriptions continue on a very limited scale, and consequently the whole trade is practically running on home manufactures, with the result that values are fairly well maintained at £12 12/6 to £12 15/-, with a premium of 5/- per ton asked for autumn delivery. COTTON CAKES—The inclement weather is causing an increased consumptive demand, and present prices, especially of Egyptian at £7 12/6 ex quay and £7 7/6 ex ship for arrival, are regarded as relatively good value; while English makes also attract rather more attention at £7 12/6 to £7 15/- and Bombays at £6 15/-. DECORTICATED COTTON CAKES—Ready parcels of 50 per cent. Rangoon meet a steady sale at £13, and a good business is still passing in prime American meal at £11 10/- ex ship for September-October shipment, and £11 5/- for October-November. GROUND NUT CAKES—Fine quality Spanish decorticated (55 per cent.) offer cheaply at £12 15/- to £13 ex warehouse, with sellers of best white Plate afloat at £12 5/- ex ship terms. OFFALS—English middlings are again the turn dearer at £8 15/- to £9, and millers have further advanced the price of bran, and to-day ask £6 10/- to £6 15/- per ton. MAIZE FOODS—Garton's maize gluten feed and maize germ meal find a free sale, being cheaply quoted at £8 10/- and £8 15/- per ton, respectively. SUGAR FOODS—Hughes' patent Molascuit and Molassine Meal meet a steady consumptive inquiry at late rates. Best cane cattle feeding treacle remains exceptionally good value at £4 5/- per ton, in 6 cwt. casks.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BRADFORD WOOL, Monday.—Owing to the local holiday week being in force, the market is very quiet. Quotations for tops and yarns are well maintained, however, and the tone is good. Topmakers are independent sellers owing to the strength of raw material. The outlook for fine wool trade with Germany is being affected to some extent by political uncertainty.

LIVERPOOL COTTON (Closing), Monday.—American quiet. Brazilian quotations reduced 12 points. East Indian unchanged. Egyptian a fair business. August, 11.71d.; September, 11.61d.; October, 11.52d.; November, 11.47d.; December, 11.44d.; January, 11.40d. Sales, 5,000 bales; imports, 9,651 bales. Market quiet.

LONDON METALS MA[...]ET.

TIN—Market ruled quiet, but [...]y, and really without change on balance. Cash quo[...] £158 15/- to £158 17/6; three months, £158 17/6 to £159; settlement price, £158 15/-. Sales, 600 tons. Cash done £159 to £158 15/-; late August, £159 2/6 to £158 17/6; with three months, £159, £159 5/-, £158 17/6, and £159. COPPER steady, but trading was carried on rather quietly. Cash quoted £64 2/6 to £64 5/-; three months, £64 5/- to £64 7/6; settlement price, £64 2/6. Sale, 550 tons. Cash done £64 2/6; early September, £64 6/3; three months, £64 5/- to £64 6/3; electros, £70 to £71. LEAD firmer. Sales, 900 tons. August done £24 12/6; September, £24 5/- to £24 2/6; October, £24; November, £23 15/-. SPELTER steady. Sales, 650 tons. August done £31; October, £30 12/6; November, £30 2/6 to £30 5/- per ton. TINPLATES steady, quiet.

CHURCH NOTES.

Dr. Scott Lidgett, who is known far and wide as a power in the Wesleyan Church and is a former President of the Wesleyan Conference, has been invited by the Bishop of Hereford to preach in Hereford Cathedral in October. Such an invitation is unprecedented in Hereford Cathedral, though a Congregational minister once read the lessons in the same Cathedral. Dr. Scott Lidgett will plead the cause of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Great progress has been made with the arrangements for the Church Congress, to be held from October 10th to 13th in Sheffield, and the official programme will shortly be published. The general subject for discussion will be "The Eternal Gospel," and it appears that, while giving full scope to its application to modern problems, the main purpose in view is to emphasise the spiritual character of the Church's message and work. The Bishop of Sheffield, who is President of the Congress, and the Committee associated with him are to be congratulated upon the strong list of speakers and preachers who have responded to the invitation to take part in this great gathering of Church people. It was inevitable that the Church Congress, as an institution, should suffer from its suspension during the years of the war; but it is fast making good, and there is every reason to believe that, with a thoroughly "live" subject and with some of the most distinguished Churchmen taking part, the Sheffield Congress will place the Church Congress in an impregnable position.

The Revised Tables of Lessons Measure, 1922, received the Royal assent on August 4th, and comes into operation on the first Sunday in Advent. The Tables of Lessons are, except for a few alterations made by the National Assembly, almost identical with the proposals of Convocation, which have been in use experimentally in a large number of churches for some time past. The new Lectionary is alternative, but there is a proviso that, when it has been adopted in any church or chapel, it is to be continually followed until the end of the ecclesiastical year. During the discussions on the new Lectionary much opposition was shown to the introduction of Apocryphal lessons; but it must be understood that they are alternative, and no clergyman is bound to use them on Sundays.

WHAT YOU NEED

and what everyone needs to achieve happiness and success, is the power of employing and maintaining one's strength to the full. Men and women whose labours involve a considerable amount of brain work often neglect their bodily health; but it should never be forgotten that physical and mental fitness are closely related. Certain it is that under the stress and strain of present-day business and social life no one can safely afford to neglect the health. It is well known that a large proportion of illness could be prevented by taking proper measures in time, and it is generally recognised that the majority of ailments have their origin in some irregularity or disturbance of the digestive organs. Beecham's Pills are a world-renowned specific for the relief of those stomach disorders to which most people are subject from time to time. That these pills are

is proved by their long continued popularity and the ever increasing demand for them. Sick headache, biliousness, acidity, flatulence, constipation, that feeling of heaviness and general want of tone, are indicative of something wrong with the digestive functions. Beecham's Pills, which are familiarly described as "WORTH A GUINEA A BOX," are speedy and safe in their action, strengthen the stomach, gently stimulate the liver and kidneys, and assist nature in carrying on her work. Too much stress cannot be laid on the importance of keeping the bowels healthy and regular; there is nothing better for the purpose than a dose of

BEECHAMS' PILLS.

Sold in boxes, labelled price 1/1¼ (56 pills) and 2/9 (168 pills).
